The Political Future

As usual after a crushing defeat, there is considerable soul-searching among members of the defeated party, in this case, the Republicans.
What is wrong?
In four straight presidential elections now, the once successful and powerful G.O.P. has taken a beating. What is the answer?

WELL our answer to question No. 1 is "no."
As far as fundamental principles are concerned, we believe the Republican party in this campaign under the leadership of Governor Dewey was on the right track.

On every important issue, in our judgement, Governor Dewey took essentially the right stand. And also in practically every case he attacked President Roosevelt and the Democratic party in their weakest and most vulnerable points.

HAD the country not been in a war—and a desperately demanding war—this department is confident President Roosevelt would have been defeated.
When the votes are all in, and a proper perspective is attained, we believe an impartial analysis of the election of a week ago will sustain this conviction.

However we grant that is something that can't be proved.

WHAT can be proved by the evidence of our past political history is that there is only room in this country for two MAJOR parties and today one must be the Liberal party, the other the Conservative party.

As long as President Roosevelt lives, and probably for many years after, the Democratic party will be the Liberal party, the Republican party inevitably the Conservative party.

The sooner the leaders of the Republican party realize this fact, accept this conservative role on a basis of conviction belief and give up any attempt to "outliberalize the liberals", the better for the party and for all concerned.

This does not necessarily mean handing over the government to the Democrats for an indefinite period either.

It merely means that the party be true to itself, take its stand on certain basic principles in which it believes and stick to them. And then as far as immediate victory is concerned, leave that up to the American people.

WHAT are these principles? Well those Governor Dewey so clearly enunciated in the recent campaign under the general heading of faith in this country and its future. Yes faith in America not as a totalitarian or socialistic or a semi-communistic state, but as the free democratic government of our forefathers. And under a profit-capitalistic not a Soviet system!

There is the fundamental issue between the Democratic and Republican parties. And when the people of this country return to the ways of peace and are able to consider something except this ghastly madness of fighting and dying, we are confident they—or a majority of them—will choose the latter.

There are many collateral issues of course, but all the product of this central theme. And two years hence, and more so four years hence, this department believes the essential differences between the two parties will be plain. They were plain to over 20,000,000 voters in this campaign—let there be a 10 per cent change and the Republicans will win.

YES, it is just as simple as that—at least as we see it.

As for what will happen when the Democratic party no longer has the magic aid of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, there is no doubt that politically speaking his retirement from public life would be a tremendous loss. Yet even if he should be a candidate for a 5th term we believe the Democratic party will be beaten—in all probability, badly beaten.

ON the other hand if the Republican party now largely purged via the ballot box of its isolationist and reactionary elements, led by young and vigorous men of the aggressive Dewey type, should either repudiate that leadership in favor of the old guard, or try to beat the Democratic party where that party is strongest, along economic-revolution and social-reformation lines; whether Roosevelt were still in command or not, the Democrats would again win.
And richly deserve to win, too!

Police Doubt Boy Trapped For Week

Long Beach, Cal., Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Police today expressed doubt that 9-year-old David Bourdonnais, the "trailer kid," had been locked up for a week in the foot-wide trunk of an abandoned trailer and said they didn't think "he was telling all he knew about the incident."
David, who is recovering from his ordeal at Seaside hospital's navy clinic, identified the 12-year-old playmate who locked him up a week ago Sunday and police planned to question both boys further. The name of the other youth involved in the incident was not revealed.

OFFICIALS DENY BOAT SUNK OFF CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Navy spokesmen today denied reports that a navy cargo-transport had been either sunk or damaged by enemy action off the California coast following discovery of a lifejacket and debris on the shore at Encinal beach.
Mrs. Cornelia Runyon reported to the Malibu sheriff's office that she had found a lifejacket stamped "U. S. S. Admiral W. S. Benson" and several wooden crates on the shore near her home.
The navy officials said the "Benson" is now at anchor at a west coast port.

News Behind The News
By Paul Mallon

Washington, Nov. 14.—Mr. Ickes, who generally says the wrong thing at the wrong time for the administration, is out now with his quadrennial refrain—a little softer voiced this time—that the press neither led nor followed public opinion in this election. Not many will accept his challenge to dismiss the facts, because these are already too apparent to the people.

Paul Mallon

It took courage for anyone operating under the thumb of the government to oppose Mr. Roosevelt. As everyone knows, newsprint distribution is controlled by the administration and this is the life's blood of newspapers. Their ability to survive and their profits actually depend on the amount of print paper the government gives them. Those newspapers who decided to oppose Mr. Roosevelt obviously could not have been inspired by any of the baser instincts—business or selfishness, which is more than can be said for Mr. Ickes.

THIS time it was apparent to most people also that the press appeals on both sides were directed toward the intelligence of the people. This reflects the fact that their decisions were made in good conscience. The fanning of emotions was practiced with abandon, and largely by the extremists among whom the administration was more than amply represented by the Ickes crowd.

I would not bother to point to circumstances so glaring, were it not for the fact that there is a constructive job in relation to news and comment that Mr. Ickes could be doing, instead of promoting post-election discussions about a campaign in which nearly 22,000,000 people were for Dewey and 3,000,000 more for Roosevelt and not Ickes, for if he had been the candidate I do not think even he will contend the result from the people would have been the same.

Newspapermen generally study facts, issues and the prospects of what is ahead for the country more closely than the average citizen who may only read in haste as he hurries on with his living, gathering his political decisions from a glance at headlines, and what he hears from politicians. What is needed constructively is more facts, greater newspaper presentation of them, rather than less.

BUT Ickes does not deserve so much attention as a press condition which may wreck the peace. It will have far more to do with world freedom of the future than the formulas now ardently discussed, yet few government officials and practically no great section of the public understands it or its importance. The new league of nations can be no better than what is done about freeing news for the world.

We speak of liberating the countries we occupy, but we will have accomplished nothing unless their press is liberated from the old government monopolistic controls by which foreign government politicians not only directed the understanding of their own people about themselves but controlled all the news to us of their activities and therefore our own natural understanding of them.

THERE can be no freedom anywhere without freedom of news. You can readily see that spied news from any of the world's nations can bring on war, as easily as aggression, indeed is an indispensable preparation of all aggression programs. In our own elections, news flows freely from all sides. Yet if only one side had been presented in this election campaign, any inducement for factual presentation would have been eliminated and aggression domestically could have been accomplished.

Basic theory of this peace is that the world nations are to understand each other in the future and live in friendliness. They cannot live in friendliness without genuine understanding and they cannot have understanding without a free flow of world news. The peace will be false, whatever new league of nations regulations are made—no matter how strong—if the news can be made false. The balance of the world cannot be preserved if the news is unbalanced.

THESE are my views. A gallant fight for news freedom has been led by Kent Cooper of the Associated Press. He spent 23 years successfully beating down European news controls as shown in his book "Barriers Down," which every American should read to understand fully the depths of the points involved. Both party platforms have adopted a declaration for news freedom and congress unanimously endorsed the idea. Yet it remains in the category of good things, which are not likely to be pressed to a satisfactory conclusion, or passed off with pious words to cover violations in practise.

If Mr. Ickes wants to do something constructive he can turn his tongue to this neglected subject and away from the American press which has just now again in this campaign proved itself to be the freest in the world regardless of government controls over many of the most important phases of its business.

FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS HOLD MEETING

The annual fall meeting of the first district of the State Federation of Women's Clubs was held in the civic clubhouse at Ashland November 9. Forty-two delegates attended from Ashland Civic Club, Ashland Junior League, Talent Women's Club, Bellview, Grants Pass Breakfast Club, Grants Pass Junior Women's Club and Rogue River Civic Club.

The meeting was called to order by the district president, Mrs. Arthur Peters of Ashland with salute to the flag led by Mrs. T. O'Hara and devotions by Mrs. Carson. After routine business the club presidents were asked to tell their plans for the future.

Special guests and speakers were Mrs. George Morehead of Salem, State Federation president, and Mrs. Buena Maris, dean of women of Oregon State College. Mrs. Morehead being the luncheon guest of the Ashland Rotary Club, Mrs. Maris spoke first on leadership, both in outside activities and especially of its lifelong influence for good or ill on children in the home.

She declared the words "juvenile delinquency," thought "Conservation of Youth" a better term, and gave her hearers much to remember and act upon.

Luncheon was served buffet style by the Ashland Civic Club. Mrs. Morehead then gave a graphic and interesting account of her attendance at the General Federation Board meeting in Washington, D. C. She also had the pleasure of attending the National Health Association meeting and the New York Tribune Forum in New York City and the time was all too short for the many fine things she had to tell.

Two Ashland young ladies sang beautifully for the audience and the delegates left much encouraged in their club work and of the value of federation.

JOE GOULD'S FOUND GUILTY

New York, Nov. 10.—(U.P.)—Captain Joseph Gould, former manager of ex-heavyweight champion James J. Braddock, was found guilty by an army courtmartial today of accepting $18,000 in bribes to influence the award of war contracts.

The 13-man court martial, which had heard two weeks of testimony, found the former prize fighter manager guilty on four charges of violating the 96th article of war, the penalty for which is dismissal from the service, three years at hard labor and a $12,000 fine.

Gould allegedly accepted $18,000 from the Cornwall Shipbuilding Company, Cornwall Landing, N. Y., for influencing award of $1,000,000 in army contracts.
