TEMPORARY WALKOUT AT PORTLAND PLANT

Portland, Ore., Nov. 20—(UP)—Operations were back to normal at Commercial Iron Works today after a dispute which prompted some workers to walk off the swing-shift Saturday.

The temporary walkout assertedly developed after the dismissal of two plant foremen, Henry A. White, executive vice president and general manager of the plant, declared the two "did not want to comply with company policies." The swing-shifters reportedly left their jobs in sympathy. The concern builds landing craft.

BLAZE DAMAGES PORTLAND STORE

Portland, Ore., Nov. 20—(UP)—Fire officials today estimated at $60,000 the damage to building and food stocks caused by a blaze which started in the basement of the Columbia Food Save-A-Cent Wholesale Grocery warehouse here Sunday.

While firemen from 22 companies were fighting the stubborn blaze in the basement of the one-story building, the first floor craved in, hurling huge stocks of sugar and other staples to the basement. No one was injured, although many of the firemen escaped within seconds of the blaze.

While firemen battled the flames at the warehouse over a four-hour period, 16 other fires in all parts of the city kept other fire companies busy.

A New way to Carve

Will your holiday bird be carved with professional skill? There's a simple, modern way to do it just as adroitly as do the smart chefs. The drawings and instructions given below are taken from a book "How to Carve Meat, Game and Poultry", by M. O. Cullen of the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Suggestion: clip them for the use of the family carver!

After the turkey, roasting chicken, or other large fowl has been brought to the table on a platter, breast up and with the legs pointing to the right or left (depending on whether the carver is right or left-handed), the carver turns the turkey on its side so the back is toward him. Then he removes the drumstick by grasping the outer end and pulling gently while the knife cuts through the joint, separating it from the thigh.

Then the carver places the drumstick on a side plate, holding it upright, and slices its meat off, carving parallel with the bone. Next, he cuts thin slices from the thigh, continuing until the thigh bone itself is exposed. Then he loosens the meat on each side of the thigh bone with tip of his knife, and removes the bone with fines of fork. Remaining thigh meat is sliced off while still attached to the bird.

Slicing breast meat with the grain, the carver takes lengthwise slices from the breast and wing until wing-to-body joint is exposed. Fork is established in wing, and wing is unjointed from body with knife. Thin lengthwise slices are removed until all white meat has been carved from this side of the bird. (All meat, of course, is placed on the side dish as it is cut.)

To get at the dressing, the thin skin under the thigh is slit with tip of the knife, making an opening large enough to allow entrance of serving spoon. "Getting at" the dressing is much simplified by this method.

Once half the turkey has been accounted for, in this manner—and provided the carver needs still more meat for a complete serving—the platter's position is reversed. The bird is turned over, to put the meaty side on top again. And the process is repeated. Simple? Of course!
