LIFE SPAN

For years scientists have variously estimated that the normal life of man should be from 125 to 150 years. According to records quite a few have attained to these ages with a number having gone beyond. Some do not want to live that long. Well, they need not worry for they have already placed insurmountable obstacles in their paths. Dr. Flora Rose, retired dean of the department of home economics of Cornell University tells us that one can live to be one hundred and fifty years old by eating right. She further says that this one hundred and fifty year span can be enjoyed with vigorous health if the proper diet is followed. Dr. Rose gives us a unique definition of nutrition in the following: "Nutrition is the key to a life in which one may enjoy the maturity of experience with youthful vigor." To attain a long and useful life you must be obedient to the laws of Nature.
