

SOUTH AMERICAN POLICY FAILING, SPEAKER CLAIMS

There is a definite downward trend in the "good neighbor" policy of the United States toward the South American countries, according to Dr. Hermanes Tovares, Brazilian scientist and educator, who spoke last night at the high school auditorium for the Institute of Inter-American Affairs being conducted in Oregon now by the Federal coordinator of Inter-American affairs and the Oregon state system of higher education.

Brazilians, and many other South Americans, are beginning to become suspicious of the policies of this government, Tovares said, and told how the people of his country refer to the growing number of United States bureau representatives as the "American invasion." Many office buildings in large Brazilians have entire floors occupied by governmental bureau staffs from this country, he said.

Air Bases Cited
Enumerating other incidents which he said added to the estrangement between his nation and ours Tovares mentioned the ceding of air bases in Brazil. This was done, he said, with the distinct understanding that they would be given up after the war, but in recent months many leaders here have begun to say that we should keep the bases. "Such action would be just like Russia taking over air bases at Seattle," Tovares declared.

To speaker also said that this nation, Great Britain and Russia had failed to ask the advice and support of South American countries in formulating and carrying out postwar plans and gave as an example the recent international conference in Chicago.

Suggestions to improve the situation were given by Dr. Tovares, who said, "Good-neighborliness cannot be carried on by government only; international relations need not be more complicated than personal relations. The plain, common people should get together and decide how these problems might be solved."

Student exchanges on a much larger scale were suggested by the speaker as an excellent means of improving relations between nations.

Following Dr. Tovares' talk Dr. Victor P. Morris of the University of Oregon faculty opened the forum period and many questions about the price of coffee, the speaker said that while legitimate business was always an excellent basis for relationships, "you cannot buy friendship and most South Americans consider such an attitude insulting." Questioning also brought out the fact that in the speaker's opinion our diplomatic and other representatives were not well selected. He further said that this government's clumsy handling of the Argentine situation had resulted in the miracle of making the Argentinians like their own government and of making other South Americans like the Argentinians.

Dr. Morris closed the forum by saying that such problems as had been brought out during the evening must be studied and solved by an intelligent and informed public. Mrs. Justin Smith, president of the Jackson County League of Women Voters, sponsoring group, presided.

Horse Informally Opens New Bridge

London, Nov. 21—(U.P.)—A London fruit and vegetable peddler, unaware that he was making history, opened the city's new Waterloo bridge informally this morning when his cart, with horse and driver doing comfortably, lumbered across the multi-million dollar span before shocked civic officials could start formal ceremonies.

The ancient nag, accustomed for years to crossing the bomb-damaged old bridge, turned in automatically and got half-way across the new span before the official party gave chase.

HIGH JAILED ON MONEY COUNTS

Robert N. High, charged in a grand jury indictment on two counts with embezzlement and obtaining money under false pretense, is held in the county jail following his arrest yesterday. He has been at liberty on bonds on a former charge. The indictment was not made public until his detention.

The embezzlement count alleges that High appropriated to his own use $2000 paid him for an insurance policy of the Mutual Life Insurance company, with a branch agency in Portland. High acted as the company's agent in this section.

The other count alleges High issued a $50 spurious check on a local bank.

High, member of a well known southern Oregon family, figured as a defendant, with a brother, in an Ashland district arson case some years ago. They were convicted and sentenced to state prison.
