

RIOTOUS COMEDY WITH CARY GRANT CRATERIAN TODAY

Raymond Massey, Peter Lorre In Cast — "Nine Girls" Rialto Feature

The poisonous pranks of two lovable but distinctly pixilated old maids are laughingly recounted in Warner Bros.' lethal farce, "Arsenic and Old Lace," starring Cary Grant, opening today at the Craterian.

With a brilliant supporting cast including Raymond Massey, Jack Carson, Priscilla Lane and Peter Lorre, the film is based on the stage success of the same name by Joseph Kesselring, which ran for more than four years on Broadway under the production aegis of Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse.

"Arsenic and Old Lace" is concerned with two Brooklyn Borgias, whose consuming passion is to murder their lonely male boarders. This they accomplish with the unwitting aid of an equally daft nephew, who thinks he's "Teddy" Roosevelt. The return of a second and criminally insane nephew (wanted by the police) with still another corpse, adds to the complications. Discovery of what's going on by the only sane brewster in the lot (a third nephew, who is a dramatic critic) brings matters to a head. Nevertheless, it all works out happily.

"Nine Girls" and "Oh, What a Night" are featured on the Rialto's twin-bill opening today.

"Heavenly Days" Booked Here

Starting Wednesday at the Craterian in "Heavenly Days," with Eugene Pallette, Gordon Olive and the Kings Men.

"Bordertown Trails" Rialto Film

Coming Wednesday to the Rialto is "Bordertown Trails," starring Smiley Burnette, with Sunset Carson and Ellen Lowe.
