Advice To Consumers

By Roger W. Babson
Babson Park, Mass., Dec. 8.—(Special Correspondent.) Some weeks ago I warned investors not to get too starry-eyed with visions of fabulous new gadgets in the post-war period. Unless human nature suddenly reverses itself, the peace-time world will swarm with promoters of war-borne inventions. Beware of a merchandise mirage! It is true that vast changes impend. If a Rip Van Winkle arouses himself thirty years hence, he will blink with amazement at the innovations spread before his eyes. However, he will discover at once that the majority of the really desirable novelties bear the trademarks familiar to us and to our parents. Most of the successful inventions will be perfected by time-tested industrial leaders rather than superseded by new concerns. The investor's route to success from new discoveries is through broadly based holdings in well-established, existing companies.

Standard Goods Vs. Comic Strips

Besides providing immediate jobs for veterans and ex-war workers, only a fast reconversion will help to swell the volume of goods and thus lessen inflationary perils. The silent menace of leached money still lurks and looms. Delayed buying can disrupt a nation's economy, life and property as can robot planes and flying bombs. Price ceilings and ration stamps are only palliatives. The basic cure for inflation is to expand immediately production power to match buying power.
People are all steamed up over jet propulsion, radar, and other excitements. Do we want service men returning with the notion that ordinary cars, present-day refrigerators and hum-drum vacuum cleaner are out-of-date? Will young salesmen aspire to sell only technologically advanced television sets, "wireless" kitchen sets, and rocket trips to the moon? Surely we will need to knock out of our heads the joke goods of the comic strips and radio comedies — and KEEP FIRST THINGS FIRST. A basic principle of progress is to use the foundations already constructed.

Strong Warning to Merchandise Buyers

As I study the prophecies of some artists and authors, it is evident that a strong warning must be issued now to buyers of merchandise. Purchase your needed goods when offered by the trustworthy factories and stores. Let's not forget our old friends. Avail yourself of a seasonal sample articles instead of waiting around for the Superman to bring you plastic plumbing and glass crow bars. Guaranteed goods do not leap from the hat. They cost sweat, tears—and time!
Few customers appreciate the prolonged effort which conscientious fabricators must devote to the development of any wholly new article. Between the drawing-board and the production line stretch long years of heart-breaking struggle. Testing in actual use imposes necessary delay. Finally, the all-important details of servicing must be perfected. All this and more is needed to assure lasting customer satisfaction.

How to Encourage Reconversion Speed
Patriotic women and men will have an opportunity to render a special service to national progress. They can use their influence and their purchasing power to encourage manufacturers to resume, at the earliest permissible moment, their output of proven products. Let these articles be up-to-date of course—and of top grade—but instead of weird dreams, give us basically normal items. These can then be bought under a WARRANTY. Instead of a WARNING. Leave futurism to the future. Goods already developed can be produced promptly. Quality is a must. Speed is the essence. So let's remember old friends. Only rapid reconversion from war work to peace work will
