

ALAN MARSHAL IN GAY COMEDY WITH BRILLIANT STARS

Lorraine Day, Allyn Joslyn
Co-Stars—Twin Bill On Rialto Screen.

Sparkling comedy and brilliant performances highlight the rollicking comedy, "Bride By Mistake," starring Alan Marshal and Lorraine Day, which opens today at the Craterian theatre.

Miss Day, who scored in "Mr. Lucky," plays a very wealthy girl, Norah Hunter of Hunter Shipyards fame, who, to protect herself from fortune hunters and publicity, has her best friend and secretary, Sylvia (Marsha Hunt), impersonate her at all public appearances.

Alan Marshal, recently seen in "The White Cliffs of Dover," has the role of Captain Tony Travis, an army flier who is convalescing near the Hunter estate. The heiress becomes very interested in Travis, but wishes to be certain that he is not fascinated by her wealth.

At a week-end party at the Hunter beach home, Norah sets out to bring Travis and Sylvia (masquerading as Norah) together. Under the influence of mulled claret which she is taking for a cold, Sylvia completely forgets she's a married woman.

This picture marks the Alan Marshal and Lorraine Day first venture into light comedy and they get every ounce of value from the sparkling dialogue and situations. Marsha Hunt is ideally cast as Sylvia, and Allyn Joslyn as her long-suffering husband, adds his delightful sense of comedy. Others in a particularly fine supporting cast include Edgar Buchanan and Slim Summerville.

"Are These Our Parents?" a thought-provoking picture is the Rialto headliner today, with "The Girl in the Case" as the companion feature.
