Ginger Rogers Hit Coming

Ray Milland is the advertising manager of a smart fashion magazine, Ginger Rogers is its editor. Yet Ray sits in the boss' chair. There must be a reason. It all happens in the stunning technicolor picture, "Lady in the Dark," which opens at the Craterian Sunday. Other famous stars in the cast are Warner Baxter, Jon Hall and Mischa Auer.

Olive Barber's Observations

"Come quick, Olive! HE'S HERE!" I didn't need to be told who was meant. Ever since we'd been told three days before that Robert Taylor would be in our building and that we'd have a chance to meet him, we'd waited for those words—he's here. The public wouldn't know. What a break!

Now he'd arrived. He was busy as I came into the outer office, but my stare, carrying the wallop it does, why he felt it, looked up and smiled politely. But not more than politely, if you know what I mean.

So this was Robert Taylor! A younger man than he looks to be in his pictures; also shorter; likewise a trifle plumper.

But I never actually met Robert Taylor after all. And all my own fault. For the word spread like wild fire through the building that Robert Taylor was in our office. Now I'd heard and read about how our sex reacts to movie stars, but I had to see to believe. Stenographers, cleaning women, elevator girls, clerks, waitresses (a number of businesses are carried on in the building) came pouring in. The word hadn't got around until his stay was almost over, but when it did ——!

Panting and starry-eyed and vowing they were positively swooning, they poured in through the door. Now the dictionary defines "swooning" as a faint, but I'm sure Webster never intended the word to convey an impression of strenuous activity. Yet the females jamming the office and hall were swooning actively; almost acrobatically. They rolled their eyes and sighed and gasped and posed. They fingered their hair and the older matrons drew in their waistlines. But the major league stuff was done with elbows after the office became really congested. The matrons were better bargers, but the young things had the more effective elbows.

One mink-coated-be-diamonded matron thrust a note into the hands of the youngest office girl, ordering her in a grande dame manner to "Give this to Bob." Such was the authority in the woman's voice, the girl did as she was bid. Besides, how did she know, but that the familiar "Bob" meant the woman was his aunt. Reading the note, Taylor only looked puzzled. His secretary said further notes should be delivered to him. The matron had been just another movie-mad female.

I was so nauseated by the lack of restraint in that mob of women had, you might say, bought net and got out. But later on I got to thinking how those women had, oyu might say, bought stock in Robert Taylor. Without their support and others like them, he'd be nothing. Remembering the theater tickets I'd bought I thought if I had it to do over again, I'd claim my rights and I, too, would—but no, I wouldn't. I'd do just as I did again, so help me.

Cows with free access to water produce 6.14 per cent more milk and 12.2 per cent more butterfat than those whose water intake is limited.
