NEWBURN TO ASK ANOTHER TRIAL

Arguments for a new trial in the case of Woodrow Wilson Newburn, convicted by a circuit court jury of a statutory offense, will be made Saturday before Circuit Judge James W. Crawford of Portland, who is presiding on the local bench during the absence by reason of illness of Judge Herbert K. Hanna.

Newburn's counsel, Attorney Hilding Bengtson, will return from the legislature over the week-end. The defendant is awaiting sentence. It is expected an appeal will be filed in the supreme court.

John G. Tyler, 20, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, entered a plea of guilty yesterday, and passing of sentence was continued tomorrow. Due to his youth, the district attorney was hesitant about recommending a prison term and the court agreed.

Tribune Girl Acts As Negotiator To Recover Lost Dog

Helen Razum, bereaved custodian of "Cathy from Wuthering Heights," blamed a dental extraction for the latter's runaway from the family home last night.

Cathy's guardian admitted the four-month-old's mouth bled more profusely than she had anticipated—but she declared, "I didn't expect such a crisis."

It was not until last night, however, during a presumably friendly tussling match between the two in the living room that Cathy took revenge and bolted through the front door and was gone.

Mrs. Razum, clerk on a local draft board, asked the Tribune reporter covering that beat this morning what she should do to get Cathy back.

The sympathetic reporter and friends all agreed she had better place a "Lost" ad in the paper immediately.

Grasping on this straw, Mrs. Razum went hopefully to the Tribune with her ad. An alert young lady in the classified department recalled at once taking a "Found" ad a few minutes earlier from Mrs. White who had Cathy safely in her care. Acting as negotiator the young woman sent Mrs. Razum on her way to 335 South Ivy, where Cathy perked up considerably when her owner promised faithfully there'd be no more tooth-pulling if she would come home.

Cathy had followed Mrs. White's "big black collie dog" home. A natural thing for a 4-month-old pup of the same breed to do.

Pressure Too Much For Lew Conger At Club Pistol Shoot

Starting off with a score which should have made him high man for the evening, Lew Conger was distracted by the sight of the new engagement ring on the hand of his fiancée, Maurine Shearer, at the Medford Gun club's pistol shoot last night and ended up fifth-high. With 92 in the first off-hand round and a chance to beat this winter's club record, the excitement brought on by the engagement news was too much for Conger and he folded, with two outside tens for a low 70.

Conger is one of the old timers and is president of the club while his fiancée is a new member.

Five high scores for the evening were Phil Whitlock, 375; Max Terzback, 367; Octavia Waddell, 367; Jimmie Bolton, 363; Conger, 359. Another pistol shoot will be held Friday, Jan. 12.
