News Behind The News By Paul Mallon

Washington, April 4. — The yarn they are passing around about the resignation of James F. Byrnes as assistant president is that he was angry about having been turned down for the vice-presidency by Mr. Roosevelt at the last Chicago convention. That is rather stale anger. But about a week before the president made the announcement of the resignation, certain senators heard he was angry again. They did not know about what — or did not say.

He had just returned recently from the Yalta conference, and if he was angry about that it did not show. As a matter of fact, Mr. Byrnes rarely shows anything. It is the best poker countenance in town. He could also possibly have been angry about the unpopular reaction to his ban on horse racing and after midnight saloons in certain quarters at least. That could not be true. Objecting quarters certainly did not include the office of the chief executive.

BYRNES won his battle over Mayor La Guardia on the night club closing with some adroit pressure from the army and navy by the simple process of having service men get up and leave night clubs at the midnight hour. Anyone who remained was thereby placed in the position of being unpatriotic, and not even the mayor's friends, the night club owners, could stand that kind of a flanking maneuver. They quit their battle forthwith and left the mayor shrieking—but alone.

As a follow-up to the other bans came recent announcements that all would be withdrawn upon V-E day, and that the army man in the Byrnes office who inspired them was moved to France to serve out the war. There is nothing in this picture but happiness at both ends of the White House, the east wing where Mr. Byrnes operated and the west wing where the president works.

YOU will recall, however, that Mr. Roosevelt's reply to the resignation letter said he was "familiar" with Mr. Byrnes "persistent" efforts to resign. That was plain, polite sarcasm, lending more credence to the inside senate information but doubling it. Furthermore Byrnes acted in obvious haste on his promise to stay on to V-E. He anticipated it by an indefinite period, with his announcement, although agreeing to stay on until then. The only anger Byrnes has expressed to his friends that I know of has been against the march of events toward socialism or radicalism or whatever you want to call the movement on the march. He could well have come away from Yalta with some reflections on how little we won there. Practically everyone is a little "sore" about that, but perhaps more displeased that Stalin has not seen fit, even so, to honor the San Francisco conference, the air conference and many other administration plans with co-operation.

Byrnes' failure to "clear it with Sidney" for the vice-presidency had the political foundation of his resignation to the left wing. This is the fundamental cause of his resignation. Whatever anger arose, must have sprung from that basic source. Furthermore the main effect will be to add one more name to the list of those of his viewpoint passing from posts of power.

It was surprising to me to see how complete each department is despite the present difficulty of obtaining merchandise as needed. Also—

Mr. Manno is to be congratulated on his selection of clerks. I was impressed with their pleasing personality and their genuine desire to help the customer—taking a real interest in their purchases. Which is very, very rare in this day and age.
