Ye Smudge Pot

By Arthur Perry

A fisherman objects to being designated as a "piscatorial enthusiast", and, he can't be blamed. He might be called a "Coldstream Guard", unless the British military organization of that name, has a patent and copyright on it.

• • •

Baron Von Papen, one of the leading German scamps, is in allied hands and safe from the bullets of his countrymen, and patriots of conquered lands. The Baron is not going to have his hide punctured by a hunk of lead. He remarked to his captors: "I wish this war were over." What he should have said: "I wish I hadn't helped start this war."

Next Friday is Arbor Day, also the birthday of Adolf Hitler. It will be a good day to plant a tree, and other things.

DATA ON JEN WREN

"The wren is a cute little thing, but a notoriour fusser. It arrives fussing and keeps on fussing. It begins its days fussing at the crack of dawn, choosing a perch just outside the bedroom window for the purpose, and it doesn't stop for breath while daylight lasts. It fusses over cats, dogs, squirrels, the gardener and the small house the gardener made for its benefit. It fills the house with twigs, then throws them out and starts over again, fussing all the while. When it can't see anything to fuss about, it imagines something, probably a boa constrictor, and fusses over that."—New York Times.

Winner In Race For Berlin To Be Revealed In Few Days

By BOYD LEWIS
United Press War Correspondent

Paris, April 18.—(U.P.)—The next few days of operations in Germany, it appeared today, will reveal whether the Americans or the Russians will take Berlin.

The swift advance of the U. S. ninth army had given rise to belief the Americans would be the first to march down Unter Den Linden. But with the opening of the red army offensive the opinion in many quarters was that the Russians will take the reich capital.

• • • • •

There is considerable mystery regarding the nature and extent of the liaison between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and the Russian high command.

Supreme allied headquarters has just reissued Eisenhower's statement at a press conference last February that liaison with the Russians is as good as he could wish for. At the same time a more definite statement on the subject has been given for the information only of correspondents.

It has been revealed that an operational boundary line exists, dividing the zones of American and Russian operations. But where that line has been drawn has not been made public.

• • • • •

Gen. Omar N. Bradley has brought his twelfth army group forces well up along the Mulde river line. It is not yet clear whether the Mulde is the Russo-American dividing line or whether the line is further east.

However, it is now evident that considerable mopping up and consolidation of positions may be required along the Mulde. Supplies must be brought up over extended lines of communication and this may dictate a brief halt.

It appeared certain that the next operation of American and Russian forces would be aimed at the destruction of the German armies before they can retire into the so-called southern redoubt. The "redoubt" is imperilled by the U. S. seventh army's advance into the Nuernberg area as well as the Soviet advance along the Vienna-Linz axis.

Such operations could be coordinated if the western and eastern armies smashed through the elongated German middle and then wheeled south to pinch off the survivors.

To the north it appeared evident that Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery would continue to bore into Holland and compress the Germans along the lines of their northern redoubt.

News Behind The News

By Paul Mallon

Washington, April 18.—The mighty men on the hill agreed among themselves that Monday was too early for President Truman to speak.

Paul Mallon

Leaders Barkley, Rayburn and others told newsmen as much at first and when Mr. Truman came up to the congressional hill for lunch, they told him, too. He listened but he shook his head and said no, he thought it would be good for the morale of the country for him to make himself clear as soon as possible. He has a mind of his own.

To this luncheon he rather pointedly invited a bipartisan cross section of the congress, not just the Roosevelt coterie. He did not, for example, invite Senator Pepper of Florida but included Senator George of Georgia, as well as Barkley.

• • •

TO possible disappointment of the brassy-cymbaled liberals, he did call in the last two real liberals, La Follette and Burt Wheeler—La Follette, who had steadfastly declined the invitation to play a minor flute of the band wagon of new liberalism, and Wheeler, who split personally and bitterly with Mr. Roosevelt.

Privately Mr. Truman asked Wheeler to help him, and Wheeler said he would. It was Wheeler who gave Truman his start in congress, and probably enabled him to win his first re-election by making him chairman of a subcommittee investigating railroad securities. There is no venom in Mr. Truman. He does not hate.

Thus remarkable pledges of support came from people with whom Mr. Roosevelt could not do business the last four or five years.

Even Republicans unprecedentedly adopted an official promise of help. This tendency of the new president has been partly observed, and I have seen criticism that he is too friendly to succeed. Such criticism can come only from those who believe in dessension as a way of life. I could never understand their position, especially as no sacrifice of personal principle is required to get along constructively with political opponents.

• • •

TRUMAN is a new dealer. Make no rash conclusions to the contrary. He is Hillman-approved and pro-C. I. O. Yet when the C. I. O. came to him a few weeks back and privately asked him to get to work to break the Little Steel Formula, he turned them down. He replied flatly he was against inflation which would be harmful to labor as to all.

The Wallace type of new dealer, is, however, hanging its collectively cloudy head. Pepper and some are saying "we all must pull together," yet average senate opinion anticipates that the Wallace campaign for 1948 is done for.

Truman opposed the renomination of Wallace strongly in the last preconvention campaign. He gets along personally with the commerce secretary and no doubt will refrain from disturbing his position. But he will not be for Wallace in '48. His closest senate friends were new dealers like Kilgore of West Virginia, Hatch of New Mexico, Scott Lucas of Illinois and Barkeley.

As the Wallace star and its surrounding constellation dim, the coming meteor of the administration is likely to be Bob Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic national committee. He will be the Hopkins for Truman.

• • •

TALK of cabinet changes are in the realm of speculation. Some men in the cabinet do not rate their jobs by any reasonable reckoning either of politics or efficiency. Yet this bad inheritance has in a way fallen to Mr. Truman's lot and he may feel it necessary to carry the burden until graceful opportunity is provided, or splits develop. It is a terrific burden.

What would give him more help than even a friendly congress could give would be a group of clever and practical men to work out methods for him to go where he wants to go in development of policies.

TEXAS-GROWN ONIONS CEILING PRICE HIKED

Washington, April 18.—(U.P.)—The Office of Price Administration today raised the ceiling price for Texas-grown onions 10 cents per 50-pound sack, f.o.b., country shipping point. The increase, which raises the price from $2.63 to $2.75, will be effective until May 15.

Today's action will advance retail ceiling prices of these onions about a quarter of a cent a pound.

RALPH COWGILL DIES IN ENEMY PRISONER CAMP

Brig. Gen. Ralph Cowgill, in Medford on business yesterday in connection with the Oregon National Guard, of which he is commander, informed friends that he had received details of the death of his son, Sgt. Ralph Cowgill, who passed away May 31, 1942, in McDonald Hospital, Philippine Islands, while the young man was a prisoner-ofwar of the Japanese. He was a member of the 31st infantry.

Gen. Cowgill received his information from an army doctor who recently returned to this country from the Philippines after having been released by the invading armies. The doctor informed the general that Sgt. Cowgill made the infamous March of Death, which he survived, but that he died later in the hospital.

The young man attended Medford grade school here as a boy and entered the National Guard through the Medford unit. He later belonged to a Portland company and entered the regular army from there. Other survivors are his mother and a sister Juanita, of Portland.
