B-29S BLAST NINE MILITARY BASES

Washington, April 21 — (U.P.) — A "very large" fleet of B-29's carried out a scattered attack on southern Japanese military installations yesterday without the loss of a single ship, the War Department reported tonight.

In an attack covering a wide area, the Super-Fortresses divided into nine separate task forces to strike at nine different targets on Kyushu, southernmost island of the Japanese homeland.

Although the big planes dropped their bombs at such widely-separated targets, all B-29's returned safely to their bases in the Mariana Islands, the announcement said.

The targets hit included Kanoya, southwestern Japan's largest naval air station, and Nittagahara, an aircraft repair depot.
