The broadcast, recorded by FCC, said 510,000 homes had been destroyed and seven wards in the industrial section of the city were "mostly in ruins as the result of fires."

The broadcast did not explain what it meant by "disaster victims," but it presumably referred to those killed, injured and left homeless.
In Osaka during the same period there were 510,000 "disaster victims" and 130,000 homes destroyed, according to the broadcast. It added 270,000 persons and 60,000 homes in Nagoya and 260,000 persons and 70,000 homes in Kobe suffered a similar fate.
