Cancer—Its Cause
The article on the "Cause of Cancer," showed that many beliefs were without scientific and practical basis. It is now known that there is a change in the amino acids of the cancer tissue. Whether this is the cause of cancer or its result is not known. It now seems that this change may be the cause. Then this change may be the result of un-natural or improperly developed enzymes. If this is true then there must have developed in the organism an abnormal physiological chemistry. It is quite definite that several factors must be present for the development of cancer. There must be an injured cellular structure. There must be a prolonged irritation to this cellular structure. And finally there must be a certain chemical condition present. This provides the field for congestion. Lymphatic stasis develops. Abnormality of amino acids and enzymes results. There is stimulation of cellular growth with improper structure, and cancer starts on its destructive path.

Medford Famous World Over For Hospitality of Canteen

Niece of Medford Couple Is Named "Miss Patuxent"

Gen. K. B. Wolfe of the army air force stopped at the Medford air base recently and visited Wing In, the canteen. On leaving he remarked that Medford is no longer famous for its pears alone but has become famous all over the world for the hospitality and good food served to men of the flying forces by the women of Medford who give their time and services to Wing In.

Commenting on the canteen and its volunteer staff, a committee member remarked "Some of these women have been working there since the canteen was established in October of 1941. They deserve special mention, or some kind of service medal. However, they feel amply rewarded by the many expressions of praise and gratitude they receive from the men they have met and served. At Christmas time cards of greeting were sent from all over the world. Most of them expressed the wish that the writer could come back to Medford again and have one of those good hamburgers and a piece of pie.

"One day the United Air Lines held a plane while all of the passengers, many in return from overseas, went into Wing-In for hamburgers. There were only two women working that afternoon, but they made 34 hamburgers in 10 minutes. The work is not easy, but most interesting. It is thrilling, too, when a plane lands and the men jump down and make a bee-line for the canteen. They have heard of it, perhaps down in the south China Sea, and their first remark is invariably "so this is the famous Wing In."

"Training flights are arranged so Medford will be one terminus as the men want to visit Wing In and have some good home cooked food. Pies "like mother makes" are all gone before they get cold.

"Many interesting stories will be told by the workers after military censorship is lifted. The guest book contains many famous names. Some men have registered time and time again. It will surprise townspeople, who see only an occasional plane in the sky, to learn that the average numbers of sales at this little canteen during a 12-hour day is 400. The project, operated under the auspices of the Jackson County Recreation committee, is self-sustaining. A nominal charge is made for the food and military personnel only is served.

"Many of the women who have helped to make this project famous have sons, a husband or some other member of their family in the armed forces. So the men who drop in to enjoy the food receive the same welcome they would get at home, which, we believe is what they want more than a hamburger or piece of pie.

"Women who would like to volunteer their services for five hours one day a week may telephone Mrs. Mary Simonds, 2016."

Soldier Decorated For Wounds From First World War
Milwaukee—(U.P.)—Twenty-six years after he was twice wounded in action, Ralph Scribbins, 44, Milwaukee, today possesses the purple heart, and an oak leaf cluster.

When he was 16 Scribbins joined the army. He was wounded Aug. 3, 1918, and again on Oct. 15, 1918, in France during World War I. But he never thought about asking for a decoration.

Now he wanted to get into the fight once more, so the army checked his record, and decided he could not serve again because of his wounds. At the same time they decided to make the belated awards.

Electronic Device Cuts Down Failure Of Bomb Missions
MINNEAPOLIS—(U.P.)—The addition of a new electronic control device is said to have cut down the number of unsuccessful bombing missions over Europe.

Unsuccessful bomber sorties caused by mechanical failure of turbo superchargers and their controls used to number 52 out of each 100 uncompleted missions. Addition of the new control has cut the rate to one out of 500.

Herbert Williams, chief field engineer in England for the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co., which developed and makes the device, revealed that its use in combat theaters has practically eliminated all difficulties formerly encountered.

The new device is called the electronic turbo regulator and it replaces the hydraulic controls once used for superchargers and automatically insures pre-selected engine performance at all altitudes. In addition, it guards against excessive turbo speeds, Williams said.

The company recently announced completion of enough turbo regulator controls to equip 25,000 four-engine bombers. The device is regularly used on Liberators, Fortresses and the new B-29 Superfortresses.

In the early days, convicts from Oklahoma were sent to the Kansas state penitentiary, while those convicted in U. S. courts were sent to prisons in Detroit, Mich.; Columbus, O.; Leavenworth, Kan., and other federal prisons.
