Editorial Correspondence

San Francisco, May 10.—War is a resort to force. There will be no more war until some nation,—or nations—decide to use force.

Now how to prevent the nation or nations which have decided to use force and believe they can make their force prevail, from taking such action.

That is the chief problem before this conference. Former Premier Joseph Paul-Boncour of France believes the only way this can be done successfully is by the establishment of...

"An international army, navy and air-force that can move within a matter of hours into security zones near the center of dispute, and take immediate action. Unless this is done, not only can a war start but a blitzkrieg can be won, before any League could collect the military forces promised to be lent for the emergency."

But unless we are completely off the beam as far as this gathering is concerned, there is no more chance of such a plan being adopted than there is of Lord Halifax doing a strip-tease at the corner of Market and Montgomery at high noon tomorrow!

Quite an important statement was made here by the daughter of former President Wilson the other day.

Shortly before his death, President Wilson told his daughter that he had come to realize it was fortunate the U. S. Senate had defeated his League of Nations, because the people of the country were not yet ready for it, and any document not supported by public opinion would be doomed to frustration and failure.

"So you see" concluded the great War President of a quarter of a century ago with a smile, "God always knows best!"

Yes no doubt God does. We don't expect the document that will emerge from this conference will be defeated by the Senate, we believe it will be passed and will be hailed as a milestone in the steady march toward a warless world,—which in all likelihood it will be,—not the end of the trip but a milestone.

But we also believe experience will demonstrate that no League, no document, no international agreement, that isn't backed by force and IMMEDIATE force, will ever prevent war, when the conditions that make war again arise,—as they will!

On the other hand, to pass such a measure at this time when the people of this country,—and we fear the world,—are not ready for it, probably would be as disastrous today, as President Wilson declared favorable action regarding his League would have been 25 years ago.

"God knows best!"

Although plenary sessions have been abandoned for the time being, and the people of San Francisco (with tickets) are pretty sore about it, the press boys here are busier than ever for there is another press conference about every five minutes.

Even Mr. Gerald K. Smith, the arch rabble rouser and all-around so-and-so held one yesterday, and Harry Bridges (what a juxtaposition that is!) has one on for this afternoon. And Mr. Henry Kaiser, who isn't exactly averse to having his picture and statements in the newspapers, blew himself for one yesterday—with the war in Europe over he is going to build concrete HOUSES on the wholesale as he did liberty ships.

The plain truth is it would take more than one two-legged man to cover all of these press conferences,—although it is also true 90% of them have SOME news value. The result is the reporters here pick and choose according to their tastes and those of their newspapers.

Among other things this man Smith, we wager, made two distinguished U. S. Senators writhe with pain and anguish,—first Senator Vandenberg of Michigan whose defeat he predicted because of his endorsement of another League of Nations; and Senator Wheeler of Montana, whom he praised to the skies as one of the world's great Americans and patriots.

The former, we have reason to believe is very nervous about the political results of his participation in this peace gathering; while the latter being, whatever his political mistakes, a man of character and self respect, could view with nothing short of loathing a pat on the back from such a specimen as Gerald K.

M. Molotov has "went" and un-mourned as far as the press-boys are concerned, (the U. S. delegation also as far as that goes). He must have ability and brains, but he certainly has not what the French call "savoir faire", nor has he anything that could possibly come under the heading of personality or charm. As far as good-will is concerned his successor, can't fail but be an improvement.

But the plain fact is,—as we see it,—the Russians don't care for good will. In fact we have a strong suspicion they regard what is commonly termed "good will" in this country as definitely as capitalistic,—a bourgeoisie—bit of hocus pocus, closely associated with the profit-motive and Yankee super-salesmanship. The Russians are realists,—materialists,—are strong enough and self-sufficient enough to do as they DAMN please whether the rest of the world likes it or doesn't. And they are just a little bit happier if the "rest of the world"—which is the capitalistic world—DOESN'T like it!

Whether that diagnosis is correct or isn't, this much is CERTAIN: it is the only explanation that makes the Russian behavior at this conference at all understandable, as far as the undersigned is concerned.—R.W.R.

ANYWAY IT ISN'T JUST NERVES

Medicine, on the off chance that I might find something to add to my five-foot bookshelf.

Having carefully examined the books I got stuck with, I am of the opinion that there is more solid meat in such dazzling lingo in Darwin's Expressions of the Emotions in Man and Animals and Cannon's Bodily Changes in Pain, Hunger, Fear and Rage—these two classics should be on every man's five-foot book shelf.

In the talk about what to do Dr. Brady, hypertension (high blood pressure) and colon derangement (commonly called "mucous colitis") are familiar examples of ailments which are psychosomatic (psycho meaning, mind, soma meaning body.)

Recently, against my better judgment, I took time out to read a few of the textbooks the medical textbook manufacturers are turning out feverishly, on the subject of Psychosomatic about hypertension (high blood pressure). I mentioned recently six things one with hypertension should do, namely: have complete health examination by the same physician at least once a year, retinoscopic examination by oculist or physician who uses ophthalmoscope to look at the retina, get sufficient daily exercise to provide a vicarious outlet for blowing off steam (emotional steam), drink plenty of water (at least two quarts daily), reduce if overweight, and finally, take life facetiously—and I promise to explain this in the next talk.

There are two ways to take life—seriously and not so seriously. On the one hand a good many people take life too seriously, solemnly, earnestly. On the other hand, one may be facetious without being silly or without unseemly jesting.

How do you take life? Here is a fair indication, if you are grown up. Can you roll your shoulders and come up smiling? Do you roll a few every day? If the answer is no, then I can tell you that you take life too seriously for your own welfare.

Call this psychology if you like. I think it is just good physiology.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Soft Spot. Our baby, one year old, has a large soft spot on his head. We wonder if it is rickets. Our first baby had rickets—his soft spot was still soft at 18 months, and he now has flat feet from poor bone structure. (Mrs. J. V. C.)

Answer—The large of the two soft spots on a baby's head (the front one) may be felt still soft for several months after the baby has learned to walk. So you have nothing to worry about. Prevention of rickets is described in The Brady Baby Book—for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Ambulant or Ambulatory. Some friends laugh at my notion that you recommend ambulant treatment for hernia as well as for piles. They insist I have misunderstood you. (Mrs. T. L.)

Answer—Ambulant or ambulatory means the patient continues walking around or carrying on his regular daily activities while under treatment. I recommend such treatment for hernia (rupture, breach), for hemorrhoids (piles) and for varicose veins. On request, (not a clipping), if you include stamped envelope bearing your address, I'll send you a pamphlet about any of these troubles. I'm sorry that the war has taken out of practice most of the doctors I formerly recommended for such treatment, and I now know of only one here and there. (Copyright 1945 by John F. Dille Co.)

COP GAME PROVES COSTLY TO YOUTH

Playing policeman proved costly to Richard Ellis, 17, 502 Haven street, Saturday when he was fined $15 and his driver's license suspended for six months when he appeared in city court. Ellis, along with Terry Rose, 17, and Darrell Shirley, 17, were parked on Beatty street and as an auto would pass them they would pursue the auto with one of the boys making a sound like a police siren. As the motorist would pull to the curb the youths would flash a spotlight in the driver's face and ask questions relative to their driving, using considerable profanity, according to the police report.

The youths frightened several motorists with their prank until one driver decided the youths didn't look like any policeman with whom he was familiar. The autoist gave chase but was eluded by the boys but noted the license number, which was turned over to city police, the report stated. The arrest followed.

Nazarene Pastor Leaves After 11 Years In Medford

Terminating 11 years of residence in Medford, the Rev. and Mrs. Fred M. Weatherford left Medford Friday afternoon for Portland, where the minister will become head of Highland Park Church of the Nazarene. The Weatherfords lived at 806 North Central avenue.

Both the minister and Mrs. Weatherford have been active in the city's church and civic circles and the family was widely known. One son, Fielding, is a captain in the army and the younger son, Ronald, is now taking radar training. A daughter, Mrs. Robert Sutton, resides in Canby, Ore., where her husband is pastor of the Canby Church of the Nazarene.

The Rev. Weatherford's successor, the Rev. George Coulter of Stockton, Calif., is expected here next week.
