IRRIGATED AREA MAIN SOURCE OF COUNTY INCOME

The 64,000 acres of presently irrigated area in the Rogue River Basin comprises the backbone of the agricultural economy which, according to the 1940 census, provided a direct income in 1939 of $5,645,000 to the farmers of Jackson, Josephine and Curry counties, it was reported yesterday by F. C. Hart, head of the Medford office of the Bureau of Reclamation, an agency of the U. S. Department of Interior.

Hart spoke at the noon luncheon meeting of the Medford Rotary club at the Medford hotel. He and his staff came to Medford from Grants Pass in May, and have their office in the Federal building.

Survey Being Made
The Bureau of Reclamation carries on investigation, design, construction and operation of projects involving utilization of water resources for irrigation and power purposes, Hart stated. In the survey work now being done in the Rogue River Basin, the group is taking into consideration irrigation, flood control, power, municipal water supply, navigation, recreation, fish and wildlife and mineral and timber resources, in recommendations for future development, he said. An additional 78,000 acres of land in the Rogue River Basin is suitable for irrigation, Hart reported. Of 31 possible dam sites investigated in connection with the studies, nine are on the Rogue River, three in the Klamath River drainage and the others are on Rogue River tributaries, he added.
