BREAKFAST IS SERVED
Here is a breakfast menu submitted in a contest to supply a specimen diet list that will provide all the vitamins and minerals required by an adult to maintain good nutrition. This was submitted by the girls' physical education classes of a public high school in a glass of hot water before meal

8 oz. glass of orange juice
1 large serving wheat germ cereal
1 cup milk on cereal
1 slice whole wheat toast
1/2 pat butter
1 1/2 slice bacon, dripped
1 soft boiled egg
1 glass whole milk (8 oz.)
There you are. Nine items, no less. The high school girls, under guidance of their physical education teacher, I infer, give what they estimate as these amounts of vitamins in the breakfast: Vit. A 3,657 units, Vit. B-1 2,818 units, Vit. C 3,000 units, Vit. D 22 units, etc.

The directions say one should take the lemon juice in a glass of hot water before breakfast. That is out. We are serving only breakfast. From the pint, more or less of milk, the soft boiled egg and the half pat of butter the girls estimate one gets 22 units of vitamin D. That may be true in exceptional instances, though I'd say the breakfast would give 10 to 15 units of vitamin D.

But the lunch menu the girls offer includes two 8 oz. glasses of whole milk, 1/2 pat of butter, no other items containing even traces of vitamin D, yet they estimate the lunch provides 485 units of vitamin D! I'd say it provides 10 units. But I suspect the girls and their teacher were confused by the label on the milk bottle—perhaps they happened to choose milk doctored or fortified with vitamin D—Usually about 400 units added to the quart. But that's out, too, for the requirements were clearly specified—undoctored foods.

I hate to seem too critical—indeed, I expect these high school girls are going to get the prize or at least some special award for their menu, but first I have to find their physical education teacher, who seems to be off on vacation. It may not be amiss to point out a common error in the breakfast menu—including two varieties of carbohydrate food. To eat whole wheat toast and also a cereal at the same meal is as sensible as it would be to eat French fried potatoes with baked potatoes on the side.

In the Rejuvenation Diet or the outline of a basic health diet in the booklet "The 7 Keys to Life" (copy for 25 cents and stamped self addressed envelope, but no clipping, please) there is for breakfast a glass of orange juice (8 oz.) and a glass of milk (8 oz.) a pint of fluid—and some readers boggle at that quantity. The high school girls apparently do not mind taking a pint of fluid plus a cupful of milk on cereal. That is all right, and even more milk if you like. The Rejuvenation Diet as outlined in the booklet purports to be a high vitamin, high mineral, corrective, protective diet, a basic health diet on which to build or pattern your own diet. As it stands it is a good reduction diet too. But it does not, and in my opinion no specific diet one can conveniently follow in these days of refinement, preservation and manipulation of food will provide all of the vitamins and minerals required to maintain good nutrition and good health. I believe it is necessary and advisable to supplement our dairy diet with a fair ration of vitamin D and B1 (thiamine) and G (riboflavin), especially in childhood, adolescence and old age.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Chlorine
In my work I handle sodium hypochlorite containing 20% available chlorine in a large open tank. I do not wear a mask. Is this chemical harmful to my eyes, teeth or health in any way?
(G. B.)
Answer—No harm if the chlorine concentration is not strong enough to irritate breathing. Occasional neutralization of ammonia neutralizes the chlorine if it causes irritation. (Copyright 1945 by John F. Dille Co.)

7 Million Jobless Next 6 to 8 Months

Boston, Aug. 20—(U.P.)—The United Business Service predicts that 7,000,000 workers will be unemployed within the next six to eight months.

"However, large numbers of war workers, especially women, will leave the labor market," the service said, "and the service industries will absorb a substantial number of workers. Nevertheless, unemployment will again become a major homefront problem."
