CAREFUL DRIVING URGED IN STATE OVER LABOR DAY

Secretary of State Robert S. Farrell, State Police Chief Charles P. Pray and State Highway Engineer R. H. Baldock joined today in a program designed to encourage safe driving in Oregon during the September Labor Day holiday period.

The three state traffic authorities, representing the three E's of accident prevention—Education, enforcement and engineering, said their action was prompted by anticipated increases in traffic volume and pace, resulting from recent abandonment of wartime restrictions on gasoline and the 35-mile speed regulation.

Here is what the three officials had to say:

Danger Greater
 Secretary of State Farrell: "Exposure to accidents is certain to be greater during the Labor Day holiday period this year, as a result of increased volumes of traffic, faster driving speeds and poor tires. But this increased exposure need not necessarily mean an increase in the accident rate. The individual driver can prevent accidents by observing traffic regulations, keeping alert to traffic conditions and considering the rights of the other fellow. Now that the war has ended, it would be tragic indeed if the first Labor Day holiday should be marred by a serious traffic toll of human lives. Let's drive carefully and avoid accidents."

State Police Chief Pray: "We are faced with an inevitable increase in traffic congestion and pace as wartime restrictions are relaxed. The state police will be alert and vigilant to keep the flow of traffic moving in accordance with the law."

State Highway Engineer Baldock: "If the Labor Day traffic follows past experience, we may expect a vehicle volume three times or more greater than that of normal days. The resulting congestion, particularly at points of limited sight distances such as curves and hill-crests, will increase the accident hazard unless drivers exercise proportionately greater care. Oregon's highways are in excellent condition, and if the driver exercises common sense, remembers that his car may not be in the best of condition mechanically, and drives accordingly, there need be no increase in the accident rate during the Labor Day holidays."

Travel Heavier
 Traffic recorder figures show that on Labor Day of 1941, a total of 12,095 cars passed one recorder on a major highway. This was four times the normal day's volume of around 3,000 cars, Farrell said. During the war, the volume dropped considerably and on Labor Day of 1944, the count at the same recorder was 3,534 vehicles.

"Since, in normal years, the Labor Day volume is from three to four times greater than on normal days, we may expect similar increases this Labor Day, now that wartime travel restrictions have been eased, Farrell declared. "This sharp increase in traffic volume, combined with an increase in pace, spells trouble for the unwary motorist."

Safety Rules Listed
 The three state officials listed these five rules of safe driving and suggested their observance in the interests of accident prevention and vehicle and tire conservation:

1. Drive at a speed safe in the light of traffic conditions.
2. Never pass on curves or at hill crests.
3. Keep in line when caught in a long line of cars. Jockeying in and out of the right-hand traffic lane is dangerous in congested traffic.
4. Avoid driving when drowsy. Have an alternate driver, or stop at the side of the road for a nap.
5. Observe traffic regulations at all times.

"Our first post-war Labor Day holiday period need not be marred by traffic accidents if individual drivers will accept their responsibility in avoiding them," Farrell declared.

Your Health and It's Care
 By DR. WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.
 Readers should address inquiries to Dr. William Brady, 285 El Camino, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Dr. Brady. If this is not quite obvious to you, here are some indisputable facts to make it clear:

HOW ARE THE MOSQUITOES DOWN YOUR WAY?
 Are you annoyed by mosquitoes out your way? Be careful how you answer, for it depends largely upon your own intelligence and the standard of intelligence in your immediate neighborhood whether you suffer much, little or not at all from the mosquito nuisance.

If this is not quite obvious to you, here are some indisputable facts to make it clear:

1. Mosquitoes breed ONLY in stagnant or standing water—salt water, fresh water, pure water, polluted water, water standing in open well, cistern, barrel, can, cow-track, wagon rut, obstructed cave trough, pond, pool, fountain—wherever water or watery liquid may stand for a week or more.
2. Mosquitoes commonly hide under weeds, tall grass, shrubbery, etc., through the daytime. But they do not breed there, unless there is a bit of broken glass or an old can or piece of crockery that holds a little water.
3. Spraying a little kerosene or petroleum oil on any such collection, pool or reservoir of water keeps a film on the surface which prevents the mosquito larvae from breathing and so stops the cultivation of mosquitoes. If your neighbor is both ignorant and obstinate about this, try giving him mosquito-growing pool a shot of kerosene or other petroleum oil some night when he isn't on guard. Of course this doesn't promote the longevity fish in the pool, or of plants, but it does improve the environment so far as the mosquito nuisance is concerned.
4. Minnows, if you can procure them, eat the mosquito larvae and so at least tend to ameliorate the nuisance. Goldfish are of no value for the purpose.
5. If the water is running water, even the same water is kept circulating round and round by water pump, or if it is naturally running water, mosquitoes will not breed in it. If the water in a standing pool, barrel, or other container is drained and fresh water supplied at least once a week, mosquitoes cannot breed in it. If the water in barrel, well, cistern or other container is kept carefully screened, the female mosquito cannot deposit her eggs on the surface and so mosquitoes cannot breed in it.
6. If you use kerosene or a mixture of one-third kerosene with two thirds crude oil, the surface should be sprayed about once a week, as the film of oil is volatile and may disappear in that time.
7. In surveying a neighborhood or district for mosquito-breeding nuisances, do not overlook such likely places as old unused wells or cisterns, privy vaults, sewer outlets, pot-holes, watering troughs, sagging or obstructed eaves.

Jobs-For-All Bill Held 'Commonsense'
 Washington, Aug. 30—(U.P.)—Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach said today the administration's jobs-for-all bill presented "a commonsense approach" to the problems of depression and unemployment.

He said it is not "some bogey to be feared."

"There are too many impoundables" for an accurate conclusion now, of the number of jobs necessary for "full employment," he told the senate banking committee.
