THIRTY TEETH MORE OR LESS

I don't know whether the physicians or the dentists are the more to blame for it, perhaps it is fifty-fifty, but in view of the pretensions of both groups in regard to the "scientific" and "progressive" character of medicine and dentistry these days it is nothing less than a scandal, the crude, irresponsible and arbitrary way many practitioners of medicine and dentistry sacrifice the teeth of their unwary patients.

Now now stupid, don't show your ignorance by taking umbrage at this. When it comes to all-around ignorance I can qualify in almost any field outside of my own little racket—health and hygiene. Therefore, when I call people ignorant here I mean, of course, that they don't know anything about health and hygiene. Most college and university graduates, most teachers, most lawyers, most ministers, most authors, not to mention most businessmen and capitalists and parasites and bigshot gamblers and politicians, are ignorant of health and hygiene. How do I know? Why, they're letters, their queries, their childish notions about preservation of health and prevention of disease amount to overwhelming documentary evidence of it. This query turns up in the mail to-day:

"I have been troubled for five years with arthritis in my hands. The dentist suggested removing thirty teeth, which I had him do. The family doctor told me to take (a kind of disguised aspirin) when my hands pain me. I do so want to get at the root of the trouble, so I am asking for your pamphlet 'Calcium and Rheumatism.'"

(Signed, Mrs. —)
Just like that. The dentist apparently gave the patient's mouth a cursory survey, maybe made a few X-ray films to lend a "scientific" air to the examination, and shook his head over the problem, said St-t! St-t-t; in that sympathetic way, and firmly but gently informed the lady that her best bet would be to get rid of all those treacherous teeth now. You know, he probably followed up with the old one-two, a tooth with infection around the root or a "dead" tooth is a menace until it is removed... and the poor ignorant patient succumbed without a thought of having medical advice about it. Maybe it would have been useless to consult her doctor about it. Too many medical practitioners are willing to sacrifice teeth on the flimsiest of suspicions or just on the off chance.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Imperial Gallon
From an item in your column I infer that a gallon of blood in the body of an adult I had always thought there is two gallons of blood in the body.
(G. L.)
Answer—Physiologists estimate there is a little more than a gallon of blood in a healthy adult body.

Tired Husband
My husband, 35 years old, is tired all the time, can't get enough sleep, goes to bed early and can hardly get up in the morning. He has pains in shoulder, thinks it is old age coming on. I wonder if he lacks something in his diet.
(Mrs. K. W. Oklahoma)

Answer—From this distance I can't even guess. But I can tell you it can do no harm if your husband will begin taking a daily ration of iodine. Being stamped self-addressed envelope for this pamphlet "Iodine Ration."

Henry Borsook, M.D., professor of biochemistry, California Institute of Technology, says in his book on Vitamins (Viking Press, N. Y. City) that vitamin D is the only vitamin that is harmful in over-dosage. The effects of over-dosage for a long period are deposits of calcium where normally no such deposits occur—for example, in the kidneys and blood vessels.

Answer—Dr. Borsook's book is one of the best for lay readers. To the best of my knowledge and belief, there is no substantial ground for the notion that "over-dosage" of vitamin D for a long period may cause kidney stones or anywhere else. There is no reason to believe that there is any danger of "over-dosage" of any known vitamin in any circumstance. Vitamins are food, not medicine.
