LIFE-SPAN

Much has been said of recent years relative to increased "life span." This has led many to believe that the national health has been greatly improved and the life-span lengthened. Such is apt to give the infant mortality has been reduced. Yet the death reaper continues his pace in the older age groups. "Defensive Diet" reports that Dr. V. G. Heiser, author of "An American Doctor's Odyssey," recently said before the Advancement of Science: "Your chance of increasing your life span after the age of 35 has not been increased one iota in the past 100 years!" This only substantiates a statement the writer has made several times. Improvement has resulted in the saving of the young. But little or nothing has been done for the person after the age of 35, and especially so should he have a chronic disease. It is time research from a new viewpoint be started.
