

The constitution became the law of the land on June 21, 1788, when the ninth state ratified it.

"The Torch of World Peace!"

Here and everywhere in this suddenly peaceful land is about to be observed National Newspaper Week—a long established occasion which, this year, has an exciting new significance.

After their great wartime job, the newspapers are dedicating themselves to a greater-than-ever task—to provide the information needed as a guide by a self-governing people who find themselves in a brand new world where even early 1945 has become a part of the Long, Long Ago.

Since last Spring we have revamped both the physical world and the man-made world! We smashed the Axis—and we've split the atom! And, since last Spring, the nations have adopted a new way to live together as friends.

These epic events have set the newspapers their new task and have given high purpose to the slogan of National Newspaper Week: "A Free Press—the Torch of World Peace!" For it was the newspapers that told the first full story about them all—the atomic bomb, victory, everything. And it will be the newspapers which bring the details of mankind's strides and struggles from now on.

How important that contribution will be already has been indicated—by the quick adoption of the San Francisco Charter. Observers credit its prompt acceptance primarily to the completeness with which the press kept the people informed about the San Francisco Conference—and thereby established their pattern for service in the tremendous future.

ARCHDUKE URGES CHRISTIAN PEACE FOR ALL PEOPLE

World Must Bend Effort to Internationalism or Face Atom War, Speaker Says.

Unless the people of the world bend every effort towards a Christian peace and the replacing of nationalistic thought with internationalism, they might as well prepare themselves for an atomic war which could destroy an entire nation in one day, declared the Archduke Felix of Austria in an address last night at the auditorium before members of the newly organized Knife and Fork club and guests. His subject was "Rebuilding Europe."

The speaker defined "a broad Christian peace" as one which would promote individual rights for the people of all countries such as the citizens of this nation enjoy, one which would assure representation for minorities and promote equality as well as majority rule and pointed out that the United States form of government supplies all these for its people in practically a perfect form.

Need Outlook Change
Archduke Felix declared that

DON R. NEWBURY,
Attorney for Plaintiffs,
Room 207, United States Nat'l Bank Bldg., Medford, Ore.

modern wars spring not alone from economic causes but also from the promotion of national ideologies, such as Nazism in Germany, and said that unless nations changed from the nationalistic outlook to an international viewpoint, civilization would be destroyed. The speaker said extreme nationalism must not be confused with patriotism. The duke stated he did not believe Europe was ready for a United States of Europe at this time but proposed instead groups of confederacies, one to be in central Europe, one for the Balkan states, one for the Scandinavian countries, etc. By beginning first with these smaller confederacies which would work out their economic and political problems, a United States of Europe would eventually evolve from this nucleus, he said. He believes Europe, especially the small nations, would welcome such confederacies.

Europe Disappointed
Discussing the United Nations Organization, the duke declared most Europeans were somewhat disappointed with the San Francisco agreement, and that since recent developments, including the atomic bomb, had already made revision imperative, he believed this should be worked upon immediately.

Europeans are especially dissatisfied with the veto provisions of the UNO charter, the duke declared, and added that the present veto provisions leaves little security for the smaller powers and cited this as an instance where "equality" was needed, rather than "majority" rule. He cited the international labor office provisions of the charter as being especially desirable and said he believed this would eventually materially aid in solving Europe's economic problems through dissolving of tariff barriers and other adjustments.

Giving the present London conference between the five big world powers as an example, Archduke Felix said questions which concerned all nations should not be settled by just a few and pointed out that the Italian peace decisions were being made by representatives of countries who had little knowledge of and less interest in the Italians.

Food Need Desperate
During a question period the speaker said the food situation in Austria is desperate, with the people actually receiving less food under the Allied occupation than they received under the Germans. Questioned about Russian influence in central Europe, the duke said he believed this would turn out to be negligible if democratic elections were conducted without outside influence. He said democratic elections need not be "troop controlled" but would result from complete freedom of the press. In all instances, the speaker said, the people of each section and each nation should be permitted to decide questions for themselves whenever possible.

Archduke Felix was introduced by Frank Van Dyke, Ashland, a vice president of the club, and the Rev. George R. Turney, president. The Rev. Henry Orth delivered the invocation. E. E. Schlotz, national organizer for the Knife and Fork club, spoke briefly and read congratulatory messages from the national office and other Oregon clubs.

CURE-ALL COSMIC RAY MACHINE MAN ORDERED TO MOVE

Long Beach, Calif., Sept. 26—(UP)—Roy Beebe and his cure-all cosmic ray machine were given 30 days to find a new location today, after neighbors complained they couldn't take a bath without finding some of Beebe's patients perched on the water-closet.

Weary Long Beach citizens told the city council that 4,000 visitors pounded their way daily to the wiry, black-haired "research chemist's" door. En route they stirred up dust, tangled traffic, made noises, sang, built bonfires, and made funny faces at passing children, the neighbors claimed.

Disturbance Created
Shortly after the atomic bomb news was released Beebe's "guests" almost trebled and they streamed into his house from 6 a. m. to 11 p. m., trampling flowers and breaking milk bottles, neighbors said.

The sympathetic council after consulting zoning ordinances asked Beebe to sign a promise that he would move within 30 days, or they threatened to have his activities declared a public nuisance.

Beebe doesn't charge anything for cosmic ray baths, drinks of cosmic-treated water, or samples of cosmic-treated wheat.

However, he admitted that his patients sometimes leave "gifts" as they pass out the door.

Cosmic Box Mystery
Beebe claims that since January 1 over 750,000 persons have brought him jars of water and loaves of bread to be "soaked" in his little cosmic ray box.

Scientists are slightly puzzled about just how Beebe gathers the cosmic rays, which he claims emanate from interstellar space into the box.

"We don't see how it could be done," they declared.

And Beebe won't tell them.

"Relax" is the word...Have a Coke

...or making a rest refreshing

Wartime tension and overtime work make relaxation doubly important. Whether fishing or spending Sunday on your own porch, there's nothing like ice-cold Coca-Cola to make a brief rest refreshing. Keep Coca-Cola in your refrigerator at home. Have a Coke is the invitation to enjoy the pause that refreshes.
