TEETH TO G AMBLE WITH

She cannot seem to get help from any doctor for paralyzed eyelids or droopy lids. One lid is completely down and the other halfway down. The focus is wrong but the eyesight is O.K. Twenty-six of her teeth were sound but were removed to see if it would help. It didn't help a bit... (K.H.G.)

Dr. Brady

Drooping eyelid (doctors call it ptosis) usually affects both upper lids, though one lid may droop more than the other.

If the condition is congenital (present at birth) the lids of both eyes droop and only operation which connects the lids with the muscles that elevate the brows will correct the trouble. In some cases of ptosis of only one lid the condition may be from paralysis and with medical treatment it may be remedied in the course of a few months. In any case if the lid droops enough to partially cover the pupils, so that the individual has to throw back the head to get clear vision or to see out from under the drooping lid, some sort of operation should be done.

This operation may be done under local anesthesia, painlessly. It involves no risk to the eyes or eyesight.

The correspondent states that "twenty-six of her teeth were sound but were removed to see if it would help. It didn't help a bit."

By way of compensation for that atrocity thirteen teeth of the doctor who conspired to perpetrate that crime should be removed to see if it would help, that is, if two such preposterous mountebanks can muster that many teeth between them.

This shocking malpractice, whether committed by the doctor or by the dentist or by both in collusion, calls for a drastic remedy. A lawsuit for damages in a reasonable sum — never less than $1000 per tooth—seems indicated. If my teeth were involved you betcha there would be such a suit.

Mind, now, I do not believe or imply that extraction of one or, rarely, more than one tooth, may not be the best treatment for this or that condition which, in the judgment of a physician and a dentist, is due to focal infection. I do believe and say that it is never justifiable to remove such a tooth or teeth in the circumstance unless the doctor and dentist have first considered the question in consultation and agreed upon the sacrifice of the tooth or teeth.

I wish people would not tell me these things. I shudder every time that statement recurs to mind: "Twenty-six of her teeth were sound but were removed to see if it would help." It seems painfully evident that something is rotten in the state of Medicine.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Lead Arsenate

May I have the instructions printed some time ago for removing lead arsenate residues from vegetables, leaves fruit, etc? (Mrs. M.A.F.)

Answer—Ordinary washing will not remove all of the dried residues of such spray from greens, fruits and above ground vegetables. After ordinary washing, rinse or stand for a few minutes in 1% hydrochloric acid solution in water, then rinse the acid away with clear running water. To prepare 1% hydrochloric solution mix a pint of medicinal Dilute Hydrochloric Acid (USP BP) which is 10% strength, with nine pints of plain water.

Bellyache and Nausea

What effect would mild poisoning from spray residue on lettuce, celery and other things eaten raw or in salad have if one got an overdose? (R. W.)

Answer—Suspicious enough to warrant excluding such items from the diet for a week are vague bellyache with nausea, with or without diarrhea.

Foods Leaving Acid Ash

Please give a list of foods that leave acid ash in the system. (R. J. W.)

Answer—Eggs, meat, fish, white bread are the main foods in the list. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope for the red book—What to Eat and Why. It contains lists of acid-ash alkali-ash, neutral ash foods.

YANKEES TRAPPED BETWEEN WARRING CHINESE FORCES

Chungking, Oct. 5 — (U.P.) — Five liaison planes today dropped emergency rations to American troops and Red Cross girls trapped in Kunming's western suburbs between warring Chinese central government forces and Yunnan provincial units.

Three American soldiers were wounded yesterday during skirmishing by the two Chinese forces over the dismissal of Gen. Lung Yun, one of China's most powerful war lords.

Guards Furnished

In an attempt to forestall additional incidents, U. S. headquarters ordered Americans to remain in their barracks unless on official business. Armed guards were ordered to escort all leaving the garrison area.

Unofficial reports said the American Red Cross workers, hostesses at the Kunming club for U S. troops, were being guarded by armed American soldiers. They and the troops were reported to be the only Americans in the city's "No Man's Land," where most of the fighting was taking place.
