SHIP SLOWNESS MAIN GRIPE OF HOMEBOUND GI'S

Zama, Central Honshu, Oct. 12 (U.P.)—American GI's heading for home through the fourth replacement depot established at the Zama Military Academy—once Japan's "West Point"—have three big gripes:

1. Slowness and uncertainty of ship transportation homeward.
2. Continued failure to give combat veterans recognition under the point system.
3. Failure of enlisted men to get terminal leave as they are granted officers on discharge from the army.

More Arrive Daily
Only 2,800 men have been sent out on two ships since the disposition center was established Sept. 13. There are now 3,000 high point and over-age men quartered at Zama with more coming in daily as additional barracks are prepared among the academy's antiquated and heatless buildings.

The base adjutant, Lt. Albert Daigle, Limestone, Me., forecast that the center will be able to handle 10,000 men after other processing personnel arrive from the Philippines.

The men arriving from various units in Japan interviewed, re-equipped, examined and lectured in a busy 48-hour schedule. Then they just hang around awaiting transportation.

HUSON TWINS IN SEATTLE MEETING

At home now after serving five and six years, respectively, in the army are Roy and Ray Huson, twin sons of Mrs. Ina Huson, Lozier lane. When the two young men met recently in Seattle, where the latter was being discharged from service, it was the first time they had been together since Ray enlisted in the army.

Ray, former corporal in the coast artillery, spent the early part of his army career in Hawaii and then during the latter months of the war was in New Caledonia, the Philippine Islands and Okinawa. His brother, formerly a sergeant, was in New Guinea for an extended period.

Roy Huson was discharged in August and several days ago he and his mother went to Seattle where they spent a few days with the second son and the three then returned to Medford together.

Get this New Motor Oil that resists Oxidation

A development of wartime research that's good news for cars of all ages

PREVENTING oxidation of motor oil became a major military objective of U.S. scientists early in the war because sludge is not only useless as a lubricant, but dangerous. It gums up friction surfaces... keeps even good oil from getting in where it's needed... leads to mechanical breakdown.

Research discovered a way to retard oxidation and military vehicles got a new lease on life. Now this discovery is available to you in new Golden Shell motor oil with oxidation inhibitor. The inhibitor, added during manufacture, keeps your Golden Shell free-flowing and efficient.

Whether your car is a highway veteran, or practically new, it deserves the best oil
