POISON I VY WEEK

From my own experience in practice and my experience as a victim, as well as the number of inquiries from readers from each season I would say one should be designated poison ivy week. I concede that the itching of ivy poisoning is the most atrocious, maddening itch there is—I know, for I have had practically every form of itchy you can name.
First, it is my opinion that a daily intramuscular injection of ivy toxin or extract in the homeopathic dose designed for the purpose, is the best treatment for ivy poisoning. In many cases one or two such "shots" will bring relief and a good start on healing within 24 to 48 hours.
Second—I believe taking homeopathic doses of poison ivy (Rhus tox) taken in daily doses progressively increasing for two or three weeks early in the season will confer considerable if not absolute immunity to ivy poisoning for the remainder of the season. In the pamphlet on Ivy Poisoning you may have on request if you provide stamped self addressed envelope I give detailed instructions for this method of immunizing against ivy poisoning.

Many readers have assured me that they have acquired immunity to ivy poisoning by simply eating or chewing a wee bit of poison ivy leaf. Some readers have informed me that they suffered severe poisoning by trying that. So I do not recommend the experiment in any case.
A Boston physician reports that scalding hot water will stop poison ivy itching immediately and even bring a quick end to the attack. He discovered that extraordinary relief scalding water gave to violent itching when he had dermatitis. In desperation he thrust his itching wrists under the stream from the hot water faucet, in and out quickly to avoid scalding, for perhaps a dozen times, and obtained lasting relief. Later he found the treatment was equally effective for the itch of ivy poisoning, and for intense itching from other causes.
Two readers writing from widely separated places inform me that they found banana peel gave grateful relief to the intolerable itching when the inside of the peel was rubbed slowly upon the itching surface.
Another reader reports that his physician friend advised him to plaster dampened salt over the
