NAZI PRISONERS EAGER TO LEARN TO TALK ENGLISH

Columbus, O. (U.P.)—More than half of the 435 German prisoners of war at the Columbus Army Service Forces Depot are voluntarily attending English classes.

Carefully selected, English-speaking POWs are the instructors. Capt. Bud Blackburn, commanding officer of the school, said.

This educational program of the War Department for German prisoners is nation-wide in scope. The captain said that school is attended during the prisoners' leisure time and classes are held regularly four days a week. But before the German prisoner goes to classes, he must have his eight-hour work day filled and must have his personal belongings and barracks intact.

Capt. Blackburn said English is the only subject taught, but prisoners may study other subjects through university correspondence courses.

Blackburn said it is too early to know how well these German prisoners are picking up their instruction. But he reported an enthusiastic response to the course.

Textbooks are German to English, published in the United States.

NATION'S INDUSTRY TOPIC OF SPEAKER AT ROTARY MEET

Problems of America's industry, producing one-half of the world's goods, were discussed before the Medford Rotary club Tuesday by W. L. Combs of this city, who has devoted considerable time to Labor interests in this area. Speaking at a luncheon meeting at the Hotel Medford, Combs reviews this nation's industrial progress during the past century and pointed out that, since 1929, the national debt and financial structure has become out of balance with production to a serious extent.

The urgent need for careful study of the problem by "social engineers" was urged by the speaker. He warned that the interest of the public debt is now greater than the entire debt a few years ago.
