Medford will be without a football game on Nov. 12, which will be observed as Armistice day since Nov. 11 falls on Sunday. Al Simpson, who guides the Medford Black Tornado, said the Ashland game, originally booked for Medford stadium on that date, has been moved up to Friday night, Nov. 9.

The reason, Al said, is because it appears likely that Medford will have to play North Bend Nov. 16 for championship of district 2. That would make two games coming in one week and just wouldn't be worth the risk with so much at stake.

While on the subject of the North Bend playoff—it is very likely the game will be played in Medford although nothing definite has been decided. Expense of such a game would be necessarily quite high and Medford could draw much more at the box office at home than in North Bend or on some neutral field. The Bulldogs have built up an unbeaten and untied record in four games to date but Grants Pass is the only team they have scheduled out of their own back yard. The rest of their opponents have been made up of teams of the Coos Bay area while Medford has played a selection of teams over the state, and Eureka, one of the consistently strong teams of northern California.

Darrell Riggs, Tornado captain and left end, will be definitely out of the game with Bend Lava Bears here Friday night. Simpson said. Riggs sprained an ankle at Grants Pass last Friday and is still on crutches. The ankle is quite badly swollen. It is also a possibility that the lanky flanker will be out of the Ashland game. His place will be taken by LeRoy House, who looked like a million against the Cavemen. Doug Coghill also shows a lot of promise and might run House some stiff competition.

Don Waldron, in his first year of football, is making Al Kircher sit up and take notice to protect his right end position. Kircher was sick in bed when the Tornado played Grants Pass and Waldron looked plenty good. His offensive work was nearly letter-perfect, but, like House, he needs some polishing on defensive tactics. There is a good possibility that Waldron will get the starting call over Kircher against Bend.

Bowling made its winter debut at the Medford alleys Monday night and a lot of kinks loomed up to be ironed out before the leagues reach top form. However, Dr. C. H. Paske rolled a 243 game and George Barr, president of the Classic league, rolled the high series of 581.

Athlete of the month for October will be selected by a committee of board of directors of the Medford Athletic association within a few days. The public is invited to voice their candidates for the honors with majority ruling in the selection. Every follower of sports is urged to mail his selection. The candidate may be either amateur or professional and from any city, so long as he has performed the feat for which he is named in Medford.
