News Behind The News

By Paul Mallon

Washington, Nov. 2.—Thirty-six hours before Mr. Truman spoke, his speech contained a flat program for a 20 per cent general union wage increase.

As later delivered, the arguments upon which the 20 per cent plan has been based were presented in detail—without the 20 per cent figure. The arguments contended the work-week for unions had been reduced from 48 to 40 hours; the reduction of eight being one-fifth or 20 per cent of 40. So the unions should get 20 per cent of their demands—without any price increases.

I UNDERSTAND industry served notice it would rebel against such a program. Other reasonable interests would have agreed such a political settlement was impossible of fulfillment as well as a surrender of the national economy to inflation and the unions. (I will below outline the justice of this position.) Industry was prepared to contend, furthermore, Mr. Truman had no legal authority to impose such a proposition. Resistance in the courts and otherwise was a prospect.

So the proposition was hedged in the final presentation—but how much no one yet knows for sure. The common news interpretation was that wage increases should be limited to cases which would not cause a general price increase (with exceptions). Labor, in some instances however, still thinks it means 20 per cent. Thus, the matter may yet require considerable working out.

While a change of administration front to C. I. O. economics apparently has been narrowly averted, the judicious plane Mr. Truman finally reached is open to interpretations, perhaps beyond those yet apparent to the public.

THE factors behind the decision to eliminate the 20 per cent figure are these:

There is no economic justification for a flat 20 per cent boost. The unions contend their take-home income should be kept at wartime levels in order to maintain national purchasing power. This is not necessary economically—or even advisable from an economic standpoint—for two reasons.

In the first place the spending program of the Truman administration will run two or three times higher than the highest Roosevelt budgets to stimulate purchasing power as never before.

In the second place, there is already too much purchasing power for the goods available, as anyone can see from the way people are throwing money around.

The purchasing power is too great for the amount of goods available and will remain so for the next 18 months or more—the projected time for the increase—and probably until goods become freely available. Thus, a wage increase during the period covered by this 20 per cent agreement can only be recognized as a political appeasement of the unions.

The unions, of course, claim they will not get their full wartime wage under this settlement, because they will lose overtime pay. This is true, but from the economic standpoint, the program means less production than wartime, much less, and therefore continuance of the shortage of goods in the face of already excessive purchasing power.

BOY SCOUT RANKS 36 PER CENT OVER PREVIOUS YEAR

Enrollment of Boy Scouts and troop and council workers has increased 36 per cent this year over the past year according to the annual report of Crater Lake Area Council to the Medford Community Chest board. The Boy Scout council is one of the agencies which is financed through the Community Chest, now conducting the annual drive for funds.

The council has a grand total of 1,827 Scouts, Cubs, Scouters and Cubbers as compared with 1,341 for July 1, 1944, the report states. The usual Scouting activities of hiking, camping and advancement work have been carried on successfully the past year in spite of heavy demand on the boys for war service, the report states.

More boys than ever have participated in district and troop camporees and hikes. Camp McLoughlin, the Council Boy Scout camp at Lake O' Woods, had a record attendance this summer of 487 boy weeks and in addition to the five weeks the Boy Scouts camped there the camp was used by the Southern Oregon Baptist youth for one week, the Medford Girl Scouts for two weeks and the Ashland Camp Fire Girls for one week, making nine weeks of continual operation of the camp, the report states.

War Services Aided

Surveying war activities of the boys, the report continues "Boy Scouts of the Medford district have always responded willingly when called upon for war services. Medford troops collected and shipped more than 95,000 pounds of waste paper in a drive last spring and assisted in the city wide waste paper campaign of the fall of 1944.

"In addition, they have taken a very active part in the salvage of scrap metal, tin cans, grease and old clothes, have assisted with the distribution of government posters and informational material and have cooperated with the American Red Cross, Junior Red Cross, the American Legion, USO, War Chest and other social agencies."

OLD MODOC POINT MILL IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Klamath Falls, Nov. 2.—Fire this week razed one of Klamath county's pioneer sawmill structures—the old Lamm Lumber company building at Modoc Point.

The building was unoccupied and the loss was small, according to W. E. Lamm, owner, who built the structure in 1915 for the mill which he began operating at Modoc Point in 1916. Also destroyed were the power house and fuel vault.

The fire apparently started from the nearby shavings burner of the Fleischmann Lumber company's planer, operating on Lamm property at Modoc Point.
