Red Cross Parcels Hoarded By Yamashita Says Witness

Manila, Nov. 9 — (U.P.) — An affidavit charged Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita today with hoarding thousands of American Red Cross food parcels in his luxurious home while American civilians were dying by the scores in nearby Santo Tomas internment camp.

The sworn statement of Maj. Ralph Scheidley of Cleveland, O., directly linked Yamashita to the systematic starvation of the Santo Tomas inmates and was admitted in evidence at his trial only over the vigorous protests of his counsel.

Other witnesses testified the Japanese tortured and murdered 25,000 civilian men, women and children in Batangas province last Feb. 15. A survivor said the Japanese tied 300 men by fives and forced them at bayonet point to leap into a huge well. Only seven emerged alive.

Scheidley's statement was forwarded to Manila from Crile general hospital in Cleveland, where he is under treatment. He said he was detailed to clean Yamashita's "large, many-roomed house" in Manila following home economics teacher who has lived in the Philippines since 1913, testified that she and other Santo Tomas internees in October 1944 were receiving only 1,387 calories in food per day and later this was reduced to a mere 500.

"The human body needs 3,000 to exist," she said.

Miss Stewart, a graduate of the University of Nebraska, amazed the court with her complete records of foods and their values served at the internment camp. Even Yamashita leaned forward and listened intently.
