Program Is Given On Reconversion By Club Members

Post-war planning and reconversion were the topics discussed at the Wednesday Study club meeting held at the Girls' Community club Nov. 7.

"Look Forward Warrior" by Ruth Bryan Owen was reviewed by Mrs. E. Iverson. The author, who has a background of long association in public and state affairs, emphasized the need for clearing of confusion among world leaders and that action, not "wishful thinking" were needed. She advocated a strong union of nations to be set up at once, with a constitution patterned after that of the United States, and stressed the need for universal loyalty instead of nationalism.

"Here Comes Tomorrow" by A. W. Zelomek was reviewed by Mrs. Dolph Phipps. In this book on reconversion the author states that the welfare of the United States depends on the welfare of the nations of the world and that the future peace of the world depended on the measures taken by the United States to help feed and set the war-torn countries industrially "on their feet." The author believes the world "would prosper or fight" and that it is up to this nation to decide what we want.
