WEATHER BALKS EFFORT TO MOVE ILL PROSPECTOR

Weather conditions prevented an Upper Applegate party from rescuing Andrew Jeldness, aged prospector, ill at his isolated cabin in the Big Squaw Lake district yesterday, but his condition was reported improved by a fellow mine owner, "Slim" Travis, who hiked the distance to the Jeldness cabin with medicine. Lee Port, ranger of the Rogue River National Forest service, reported this morning that Travis, owner of the Grubstake Mine and other property in the district, had offered to visit Jeldness and his wife daily until his recovery or conditions permitted his removal to the home of relatives in Medford.

Travis had visited the Jeldness cabin earlier and upon his return reported the veteran miner ill and began organization of a party to bring him out by sled, since the last section of road is now impassable by car and the Jeldness cabin is reached by trail a considerable distance beyond the end of the road. Jeldness is said to be 85 years old and his wife past 80.

Dentist Shortage Seen Possibility Until 1960, Claim

Chicago—(U.P.)—A dentist shortage that may continue until 1960 is predicted by Harlan A. Horner, secretary of the council of dental education of the American Dental Assn.
"The number of people wanting dental care for the three decades from 1930 to 1960 will show a progressive increase," he said, but "the provisions for dental care will be less in 1960 than in 1930 because it is doubtful if dental schools will be at full capacity before 1950."

Dental schools should draw students from all sections of the country in order to maintain an equitable distribution of dentists between rural and city areas, Horner said.
