

NATWICK DAMAGE CASE REVERSED BY HIGHER COURT

Oregon's supreme court has reversed the decision of circuit court in which Ruth Natwick of Eagle Point was granted $10,000 damages from Kenneth John Moyer, then a sergeant stationed at Camp White, as a result of the death of her husband, Carlyle Ray Natwick, a United Press release from Salem states. Natwick was killed as the result of a head-on collision of the Moyer and Natwick cars on Crater Lake highway Feb. 18, 1944, the release states.

The case was tried here in July of 1944 and argued before the state supreme court Nov. 7, 1945, by Gus Newbury, attorney for the plaintiff, and Charles Reames, the defendant's attorney. Don Newbury was Mrs. Natwick's attorney for the circuit court trial.

Retrial Probable

The supreme court reversal probably means that the case will be retried in circuit court, attorneys state, and in the meantime the plaintiff's attorneys may petition for a re-hearing before the high court.

The reversal was made on the grounds that the testimony of Francis Porro, Camp White medical officer, to the effect that blood tests showed Moyer had been drinking, was inadequate, the release from Salem declared.

HUMAN RELATIONS STUDY ADVOCATED IN ROTARY TALK

In the era of business prosperity ahead the scientific study of human relations becomes increasingly necessary, according to Raymond Osborne Yost, Greenwch, Conn., business counselor. Speaking before a luncheon meeting of the Medford Rotary club Tuesday noon at the Medford Hotel, Yost warned business men that "sales muscles have withered" during the wartime period when goods were scarce and demand exceeded the supply. "It is time now to come forth from our period of enforced lethargy and get back to the fundamental job of selling."

"Dollars and customers are soon going where they want to go," the former retailer, manufacturer and personnel manager reminded Rotarians in urging prompt study of the things which influence the heart and mind of man. The importance of personal analysis was pointed out. Human relationship has now been reduced to a scientific study and, with increasingly keen competition due in months to come, Yost urged businessmen to make this study for business survival.

Three members of the Rotary club were analyzed as representative of the three classes—introvert, ambivert and extrovert.

Emmerson Merrick, program chairman, introduced the speaker. W. A. Gates and Eino Hennila spoke briefly on the current Victory Loan and urged support in the queen contest, a feature of the drive.
