I call tonsillotomy (the attempt to remove every bit of tonsil from the throat, whether by guillotine and snare or by dissection or by "enucleation" or my any other method) atrocious. By that I mean to say it is a savagely brutal treatment when applied in the ordinary case of enlarged (hypertrophied) tonsils or infected (diseased) tonsils. In exceptional instances such radical surgery is not only justifiable but indispensable treatment—for example, malignancy (cancer).

But I repeat with all possible emphasis, and I hope this comes to the attention of every physician or throat specialist who misleads patients about it, there is no scientific basis for the quick notion that it is necessary or advisable to attempt to remove or destroy every bit of tonsil tissue when treating enlarged (hypertrophied) or infected (septic focus) tonsils.

It would be as logical and as intelligent to extract all of the teeth in order to relieve the patient of a cavity in one tooth or an abscess or focus of infection at the root of one tooth.

If my tonsils or the tonsils of any one for whose well being I felt responsible were at stake, there probably wouldn't be any atrocity. If it were a child with hypertrophied or very large tonsils, a child too young to cooperate with the physician, I'd say okeh to clipping or slicing off a considerable portion of the enlarged tonsils with the tonsillotomy, under general anesthesia.

For a child old enough to cooperate or for a youth or adult,

YULE DECORATIONS NEEDED AT CAMP

An appeal for Christmas tree decorations to be used at the Camp White naval hospital was made yesterday by the Camp and Hospital committee of the Red Cross. Decorations for a 30-foot tree and 12 five-foot trees are needed.

People of the valley are asked to bring non-inflammable decorations, either spare ones from the family collection or new trimmings, to the Junior Red Cross, 222 West Sixth street, before Dec. 15. It is also suggested that children make popcorn strings for the trees, and these also should be taken to the Junior Red Cross.

"We can use all the tree decorations that people can spare, and more," according to Mrs. Leonard Carpenter, chairman of the committee. "Please help the Red Cross make this a gay Christmas for the patients and staff at the naval hospital."
