CHINESE VILLAGE SHELLED; MARINES KILLED, WOUNDED

New York, Dec. 8 — (U.P.)—American Marines shelled a village in North China last Tuesday when natives refused to surrender two men suspected of killing one marine and wounding another, an NBC correspondent reported from Shanghai today.

The correspondent, Cal Hirsch, said that Maj. Keller E. Rocky, third amphibious corps commander directing the American marines in North China, ordered the shelling of the village near Anshan, in Hopeh province 48 miles southwest of Shanhai-kwan.

Hirsch reported that the marines fired 24 rounds of 65 millimeter mortar shells when the natives refused to hand over the two suspected men. The marines were identified only as a corporal and a private first class.

The broadcast quoted Rocky as saying the marines had been attacked while hunting near Anshan. The private was killed but his companion survived a second blast of gun fire after he had fallen, badly wounded. After the attack, the assailants fled to Anshan and took refuge there. Rocky issued the villagers an official order, demanding surrender of the attackers, but his order was ignored, according to the broadcast.
