WINTER U DERWEAR
This season, owing to the extraordinary balance of supply and demand, we shall be spared, I hope, the long wool underwear propaganda of former seasons. It was usually about this time of year that the heavy underwear industry persuaded a child specialist or two, who could use the publicity and the money, to give utterance to the quaint old granny notion that children whose legs or knees are exposed in the winter will probably have rheumatism some day if not now.

I was sternly reproved by a well meaning reader recently because an infant in the reader's neighborhood had been regularly put to bed in a room with wide open windows and the baby had very light or no covers—the parents asserted that it was by my advice.

Those parents may have been sincere in thinking so, but they were wrong. I have seldom failed to specify that enough clothing, bed covers, artificial warmth to keep one comfortable is always necessary. A young infant cannot tell you whether he is warm enough, perhaps, but if you are not an irresponsible dimwit you can determine that by simply feeling of the baby's hands and feet. If they are not warm the baby is not dressed warmly enough or the bed lacks sufficient cover or a foot-warmer should be placed in the bed or the bed should be screened against cold wind.

As for the hypothetical or imagined relation between "insufficient clothing" or "exposure" and "rheumatism" or rheumatic fever (acute infection arthritis), there is no evidence to support the notion that bare knees or bare legs or as light underwear or other clothing as the child likes to wear contribute in any way to the development of any so-called rheumatic ailment. That notion is becoming extinct.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Wintering in the Sahara
About this time every year my skin gets into a terrible condition in spite of constant use of the best creams (Mis A. de R.).
Answer—Life in the desert is pretty rugged, of course. The change from beautiful humidity to extreme aridity or dryness of the desert or the Mojave but the Great American Indian Sahara is tough on the skin even if you refrain from hot soap and water and attempt self addressed envelope for booklet "Save Your Skin". At same time ask for pamphlet on identification (tells you how to prevent extreme dryness of the air in the artificially heated office, store or dwelling).

Red-Wetting
Twelve years old, wets bed nearly every night. This has been going on for about four years. Physician says nothing wrong but weak muscles. (Mrs. M. C. L.)
Answer—Send stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing (not with clipping) for pamphlet on Red-Wetting. Follow the instructions therein and I'll bet you a complete set of the works of Of Doc Brady against a brief written report from you, that before school closes for the summer vacation the child will have ceased wetting the bed, provided no one is permitted to censor or humiliate the child about it. Too often ignorant and malicious people scold, punish or even shame a child who wets the bed—as though any child who is not an idiot in fact would deliberately do so.

Temporary Teeth
Child aged 14 months has fallen and broken off part of front upper tooth (incisor). Should we take her to the dentist or just forget it? (Mrs. F. H.)
Answer—Take her to the dentist, of course. The permanent or second front teeth will be cut when the child is 7 or 8 years of age. (Copyright 1945, John F. Dille Co.)

12 AREAS LISTED NEW YORK-BOSTON FOR UNO CAPITAL
London, Dec. 29—(U.P.)—The quest for an American Geneva to house the united nations organization's new world capital of peace narrowed today to 12 suburban and rural havens in the New York and Boston areas.

The six-man committee charged with inspecting the proposed locations and recommending the final choice to the UNO issued its tentative list of headquarters sites today and prepared to transfer its operating headquarters to New York City. Spokesmen for the committee said its members would leave for New York Jan. 4 and hoped to return within three weeks with their recommendation.

They said the committee would work out of New York City, inspecting each of the 12 favored sections and possibly a number of other districts not under consideration at present. The selection will be made with an eye particularly to convenient isolation from the crowded industrial areas surrounding New York and Boston, available land for building, and adequate transportation for the UNO delegates.

Closing time for Sunday Too Late to Classify 4:00 Saturday afternoon. Please remember.

REED COLLEGE TO RUSH SCIENTISTS

Portland, Ore., Dec. 29—(U.P.)—A new streamlined plan to speed the training of young scientists was announced in Portland tonight by California Institute of Technology and Reed College.

Under the new plan, intended to help meet a critical shortage of scientists in America, students with three years at Reed will be admitted to advanced standing at Cal Tech. After two years of study there they will be granted the bachelor of arts degree at Reed and the bachelor of science degree in engineering by Cal Tech.

Closing time for Classified Ads 5:30 a.m.—Too Late to Classify 12:15 p.m.
