ITALIAN PWS SHIP FOR RETURN TRIP

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—(U.P.) More than 2,000 Italian prisoners of war boarded ships in San Francisco bay today and settled down for a long-awaited trip home.

They were the first of 15,300 Italian and German prisoners that will embark here for European ports during the next few weeks.

The SS Adabell Lykes had 1250 "co-operative" Italians aboard, while the SS Alcora Patriot served as temporary home for another 927 "non-co-operative" Italians. The two ships will go to Naples.

Paralysis Victim College Sophomore Is Proud Of Shave

Baton Rouge, La.—(U.P.) Ray Lucas of Thibodaux, La., can't go anywhere without his wheelchair, but nevertheless he's a full-fledged freshman at Louisiana State University.

He's even got a shaved head to prove it.

Ray is an infantile paralysis victim, but he graduated from high school and wanted to go to college. He talked it over with Col. E. Y. Argo, civilian commandant at LSU, and they decided it could be done.

Argo worked out Ray's schedule so that he'd have time to make the trip from building to building between classes. Then he went over the route with a university carpenter, and had special wooden ramps built so that Ray could roll his wheelchair anywhere he might have had to use stairs.

It wasn't hard to get Ray a suitable roommate on the campus, because Ed McCulla, his lifelong friend from Thibodaux, insisted that he be the man.

Everything was set until the sophomores started shaving the hair of all freshmen in line with LSU tradition.

They ignored Ray. He patiently explained to the sophs that he was a freshman, but still they were dubious about shearing his locks.

So Ray went back to Argo for more help. "Make the sophomores shave my head," he asked.

Argo grinned and passed the word along.

So now Ray wheels his chair to class every day, with a purple and gold freshman cap shielding his bald pate from the southern sun.

French Nudes To Be Kept Warm By Coal Allotment

Paris (U.P.)—The French government has taken pity on two famous Paris institutions—showering nudists who pose for artists and the girls who dance for soldiers with nothing warmer than a feather fan.

It has promised special allotments of coal to the Beaux Arts, famous art school, and to the Folies Bergere. Last winter art classes had to be suspended because the models said it was too cold to strip. The girls of the Folies Bergere threatened to strike in protest at sub-glacial temperatures.

"We were promised coal but we are desolated—it hasn't arrived yet," a Folies spokesman said. "All we want is enough to take the chill off."

Last winter, the coldest for years, the famous state theater, the Comedie Francaise, had to hire a fulltime doctor to attend the coughing stars.
