Capt. Kelly Tells Grangers Vets Will Work For Peace

That the veterans of World War II will be among the most effective crusaders for world peace and for the prevention of war provoking measures and policies in the future legislation of this country, was stated by Captain Edward C. Kelly, recently returned from Military Government service in Europe, in an address before the Jacksonville Grange Tuesday night.

"Having seen first hand the horrible devastation and suffering brought about throughout Europe and the South Pacific by the modern weapons of warfare, the average returning soldier is humbly grateful that his own country and its people have been spared," he declared.

Soldiers Impressed

"Today's soldier is coming home impressed by the smallness of the world and a sense of its vulnerability in case the latest invention of warfare were unleashed against it in the future."

Declaring that the theory of Nazi race superiority was forever exploded by the results of the European war, Captain Kelly said:

"When three million Americans went overseas in this war and, distributed throughout England, France, Italy and Germany, succeeded in imposing their will upon one hundred million Europeans by defeating nazism, they destroyed for all time the false doctrine of race superiority. It was a test of the efficiency of the democratic melting pot over the arrogance of one race domination."

Issue Clear-Cut

That the issues between democracy and nazism were clear cut in the mind of the average American soldier and the effects of the Nazi philosophy on Europe so horrifying that he had a deep hatred for all the term implied was further stated by the speaker.

"The American soldier knew that in his own ranks were G.I.s made up from the same blood and backgrounds as those whom the Nazis had dubbed inferiors and made the subjects of persecution in the horror camps of Europe. It was many of these so-called 'inferiors' in G.I. uniform who got in the best looks toward bringing the Nazi supermen to their final justice."

Deer and other big-game animals should be stuck and bled promptly after killing.
