Notre Dame Remains Only Unbeaten Major Basketball Team in Nation

New York, Jan. 28.—(U.P.)—Notre Dame was sole claimant today to top honors in the weekly roll call of collegiate basketball teams.

The Irish had a right to that place after a convincing 58 to 47 victory over Kentucky's Wildcats at Lexington, Ky., the 12th in a row without a defeat this season for N. D.

The Irish, despite their perfect record, had been slated to lose to the Kentuckians, regarded before that game as the top team in the country. Notre Dame, although unbeaten, had barely squeezed through to a number of its victories and Kentucky, playing a tougher schedule, had handled all comers except Temple, one of the class teams of the east. The Irish were in command all the way, leading by four points at half time and increasing the margin from there out.

Rating almost as much attention as Notre Dame was national champion Oklahoma A. & M., which enhanced its prestige with two straight victories over Wyoming, both on neutral floors. The Aggies, beaten only by DePaul, needed these victories to be restored to top company. The first triumph by a 34 to 24 margin was at Oklahoma City and the second, 40 to 24, was at Wichita, Kan.

Only three schools, Notre Dame, Navy, and West Virginia still were unbeaten among the major college teams, but the Irish have played a more representative schedule than the others.

Warren is a great advocate of a year-round athletic program for city-wide competition. He believes in starting boys in as soon as they are old enough to hold a ball and sponsoring leagues in order to provide competition. He believes the program should be arranged so that anyone, regardless of age, may compete. Such a program is what develops winning high school teams, Warren says.

A competitive sports program for Medford, which was in full swing before the war, is now in the early stages of being revived. The city school system will be the nucleus of the thing with various men about town aiding the program.

Dale was stricken with infantile paralysis during an epidemic at Los Angeles in 1935 and spent some time in the Los Angeles county hospital. His right leg, arm and part of his face was paralyzed but he has since fully recovered, thanks to the skill of modern medicine.

In fact, he is now one of the leading players on the Phoenix high school class "B" team and has been the sparkplug of his team's victories. He has been playing with the Pirates for the past three years.

The young man will sit on the bench with the Elks, and besides being introduced to the Ashland squad, will also be introduced to members of the Marines team.

Basketball fans who attended the Ashland-Medford game at Ashland Friday night saw a fine exhibition of tumbling by 11 members of the Ashland high school tumbling class, under direction of Frank O'Neil.

Leader of the act was little Bill Frazier but he wasn't taking part in the Friday night show. During rehearsals for the act Friday afternoon, Frazier was practicing a difficult stunt and had it near perfection. O'Neil told him he should "call it enough" for the afternoon but Frazier wanted to run through the act once more.

He completed his difficult routine and as he started to regain his feet after the final flip he lost his balance and fell backwards, just from a half-sitting position but when he put his hands out to catch himself he fell just right to break the bones in his right wrist.

The other 11 members of the act were somewhat skeptical of going through with the show, but like true performers, they had the "show must go on" attitude and gave an excellent exhibition of tumbling. Although they constantly had Frazier's accident in mind, not one of them showed it.

We are not one to doubt the word of John Warren, coach of the Oregon Frosh but his team's trimming of the Medford Black Tornado Saturday night makes us wonder, Warren, who was dubbed Honest John because of his square dealings in many years service as coach of the Astoria high fishermen, visited us at the office Saturday evening. He spent most of the time crying on our shoulders about the "poor Frosh and the beating they would take."

"As fast as I get a boy developed, the varsity grabs him," Warren complained. "We just haven't a chance against the Tornado but only hope to make the game interesting."

Well, they made it interesting, alright; but not for the Tornado. When the smoke of battle died away the Frosh were on the long end of a 42 to 36 count. We had visions of a steamroller Tornado victory, on Honest John's word. Now we don't know if Honest John was kidding us or if he just lacks faith in his team.
