

CHECK AT DRAFT BOARD INDICATES POPULATION HIKE

About one-third of the men reporting back to selective service boards in this county after release from service did not originally register from here and represent a population growth it was stated at the meeting of the new Jackson County Chamber of Commerce board Friday by Wm. H. Fluhrer, new president. Discussing the present acute housing shortage, Fluhrer stated that figures from the selective service boards show that about 750 men, of approximately 2,500 reporting, originally registered through other boards and had not lived in the county prior to induction into the service. The president added that if these families are to be retained here, they must be housed and employed.

Fluhrer also told of the national housing survey made recently by the national Chamber of Commerce and to which the local group contributed figures. The national report showed 596 cities reported the housing situation as acute; 401 reported it serious and only 75 said they had no housing problems.

A plan for the erection of new, small dwelling units here was presented to the group and after thorough discussion it was put in the hands of a committee from which a report is expected by the middle of the week.

Frank Hull, manager of the group, reported on the veterans' consultant plan which is being worked out by the Chamber of Commerce and stated that about 40 had been listed and that 40 additional were needed.

Paul Rynning spoke of a recent meeting in Chicago at which he was elected president of the county officers' division of the American Road Builders' association.

Introduced at the meeting were Judge J. B. Coleman, Mayor Clarence A. Meeker, Ralph Koozer, Ashland, Oliver Gustafson, new chairman of the membership committee, and Glenn Jackson, former president of the group.
