

What Next Corporal

Marion Hargrove is back again in "What Next, Corporal Hargrove?" bringing Robert Walker to the Holly screen in a new series of laugh adventures. The bewildered basic trainee of "See Here, Private Hargrove" is a full-fledged combat man now, with two gleaming stripes on his sleeve—but this doesn't prevent him from getting into his usual jeepload of trouble

CRIME PROBLEM NEEDS INTEREST KIWANIAN TOLD

As a means of helping solve the crime problem everyone, rather than just special agencies, should take an interest in prisoner rehabilitation, in the opinion of Lt. Col. Agnes McKernan, former director of the Women's Prison Bureau of the Salvation Army, who addressed Kiwanians yesterday noon at the Holland hotel.

Col. McKernan, who has been engaged in prisoner rehabilitation work in the United States since 1925, declared that she looks upon helping prisoners as a "chance angels would covet," and expressed her belief that parents should set a better example and give better guidance to their children. She added, however, that she did not think youth was "going to the dogs."

In her introductory remarks Col. McKernan opined that the "real Americans are out West." She speaks at the Salvation Army hall this evening.

Mrs. Betty Morton, accompanied by Barbara Bouck, entertained with a violin selection at the Kiwanian meet.

ROCK MARKET TO START BUSINESS NEAR SHADY COVE

Eagle Point, Feb. 21 — "The Rock Market," located on Crater Lake highway about two miles south of Shady Cove, will open in about a month, Dr. Paul G. Olsen, the owner, said today. A shop to cut and polish rocks and to make all types of novelties from native woods, metals, ceramics, plastics and rocks will be operated in connection with the store. There also will be an outdoor salesyard for "rocks in the rough."

Agates, local jaspers and petrified wood and the famous Friday Ranch plume agates will be featured. There will also be a wide variety of cutting material for "rockhounds" who cut their own rocks. In addition, saws, grills, polishing wheels and all manner of lapidary equipment will be handled.

Dr. Olsen will examine free any ore specimens with the mineral light.

One of the special attractions will be a display room of rocks and minerals activated by the Mineralight to shades of glowing colors.

Dr. Olsen, who retired from active practice in Portland several years ago, has devoted much time to his hobby and is said to have one of the largest collections of fluorescent minerals in the northwest.
