

DANIELS POINTS TO OPPORTUNITY IN PACIFIC AREA

Stressing the economic opportunities which await the people of this nation and the major peoples of the Far East, Hawthorne Daniels, globe-trotting author, correspondent and lecturer, addressing members of the Rogue River Knife and Fork club and their guests at the Roosevelt school auditorium Friday night on the subject, "America's New Pacific Empire," explained that a great future for America lies in investment toward industrialization of nations in the Pacific. Indian ocean area where vast sources are available.

Stating that he was "opposed to America perennially being Santa Claus," Daniels said that investment in economic development of the Pacific nations would aid them to help themselves even as European capital built their own industry following the Civil war.

China Example
He believed that such aid on our part would be a force in ironing out international difficulties and would add to our wealth, as well. Giving China as a special example, he pointed out that the countries of the Far East were interested in being directed in industrialization.

Geography was shown by Daniels as a "powerful force in the affairs of men. He pointed out that "continents, not oceans, divide the world," saying that the Atlantic ocean area and the Pacific-Indian ocean area were the main divisions.

Industry Traced
Mr. Daniels traced industrialization from the beginning of the economic era in England, showing its ascendancy in the United States backed by British aid and experience until our nation became the greatest industrial country of the world after the first great war. Today, "outside America there are no individuals with economic advantages equal to ours," he said.

However, the speaker expressed fear because, "collectively today America has no purpose." Our people have the individual purpose to get while the getting is good, which is not right for the nation, he said.

"We have forgotten our basic duty of citizenship," Daniels said, "our problems are beyond solution of any one human being and we need more leaders of thought and action."

He urged a return of powers from the national government to the states and to the people, emphasizing that "We the people rule the land if we will."

Medford's water commission has found it necessary to again halt receiving applications from would-be water users outside the city limits, it was announced Saturday by Commission Superintendent Robert A. Duff. The ruling affects all applications filed since Nov. 7, 1945.

The official explained that because of the great amount of residential building springing up within the city, and the already numerous new consumers outside the city, it has become necessary to renew the rule which was first adopted when a supply of water was pledged for Camp White.

The restriction was lifted last fall when construction of the third reservoir was started, Duff said, adding, however, that the commission has since been flooded with applications. The present supply line from Big Butte springs will not carry enough water to the reservoirs to supply present and expected city consumption if additional outside permits are granted, the superintendent stated.
