REALTY VIEWS

"Why," you ask, "does Medford continue to become a better place in which to live?"

No doubt some of our progress is due to our favorable location, and the climate. But most of it is made. Made by the combined efforts of many energetic local residents. Among these is the real estate broker.

Often the broker serves as the "sales manager" for Medford. Through advertising—letters, out-of-town newspapers and folders—he attracts new residents. Many of these first learn of our city through his activities.

Then the broker serves as an ambassador and welcome for the community. He greets newcomers, points out the city's advantages, and helps them to find a comfortable home among good neighbors.

And if new homes or homesites are needed, it is the broker who promotes them. You will also find him taking an active part in accomplishing other civic betterments—finer schools, new roads and parks, among others.

In short, the reliable real estate broker serves a useful role, and is an asset to our community. We hope we can demonstrate to you that we belong to this group. Give our service a trial.
