H-Bomb Could Destroy All Life, Scientists Claim

New York, Feb. 28—(U.P.)—Four leading atomic scientists have warned that a hydrogen bomb can be built which will destroy all human life.

The scientists said that such a bomb would spread radioactive dust throughout the atmosphere.

The fear of world-wide death was expressed by Dr. Leo Szilard and Dr. Harrison Brown, both of the University of Chicago; Dr. Hans Bethe of Cornell university, and Dr. Frederick Seitz of the University of Illinois.

On Radio Show

All, who played major roles in the development of the first atomic bomb, participated Sunday night in the University of Chicago Round Table of the Air broadcast from here.

Szilard, a bio-physicist whose research helped make possible control of the atomic chain reaction, said "it is very easy to rig an H-bomb on purpose so that you should produce very dangerous radioactivity."

In their discussion they agreed that by surrounding a hydrogen bomb with ordinary harmless chemical elements, the explosion would create a radioactive dust that could be carried around the earth by prevailing winds.

Would Be Doomed

Any living thing, person, animal, tree or flower, touched by this dust would be doomed to death. The choice of chemicals, they said, would determine whether the poisoned dust would stay active for only a few days or as long as 5,000 years.

Fort Ashby, W. Va. (U.P.)—Ray Funk brought down a deer with his car but he didn't make sure the animal was dead before retrieving the carcass. Funk packed the limp animal into the back trunk for delivery to conservation officers. When the back seat began breaking loose with a "terrible racket," Funk opened the compartment, and released a much-alive deer.

Your Health and Its Care

FALSELY POSITI VE BLOOD TESTS

The victim of syphilis used to be imagined as a person afflicted with running sores—one who could transfer his disease to others by the slightest contact. The public knows better today. The public realizes that the victim of syphilis may be completely free of sores or blemishes, and may appear to be in normal health. When I mention what the public knows in this respect, I am not shutting my eyes to the fact that a great many individuals are still largely uninformed or misinformed.

Dr. Brady

The blood tests for syphilis are very necessary for the reason that very often no signs of the disease can be readily found upon physical examination. More than one unfortunate person who never had the slightest idea of being infected with the disease, has discovered by means of a blood test that the disease existed in his body.

Today, when a doctor runs a blood test, it is done without suspicion in the vast majority of cases. Taking blood for the test is such a minor task that there is absolutely no sense in not doing it as a regular routine part of a physical examination. All cases entering a hospital for any purpose are subjected to a routine blood test for syphilis.

There are several standard blood tests for syphilis, not just one. Occasionally a patient may get a positive test when to the best of his knowledge he has never acquired the disease. Close examination of the patient and his history may also fail to reveal any evidence of the disease Under these circumstances the doctor fully realizes that he is treating a CASE, not a TEST. He thereupon proceeds to re-test the blood, using other tests as checks against the first one.

It is known that other diseases may sometimes cause a falsely positive test for syphilis. Some fifty diseases have been known to cause these false positives. These have to be taken into consideration before a diagnosis can be made. Again, the test may be falsely negative. Penicillin, used for some other disease, may mask the appearance of syphilis, and cause a blood test to be negative when the disease actually exists.

The confusion is nowhere near as great as it might appear from these statements. Actually, perhaps only one test in five hundred or more will be falsely positive. When a positive test is obtained, re-testing, close examination of the history and body, invariably brings the right answer in short order. The chances for an error in the other direction may be greater. That is, in cases where an individual has undergone treatment with penicillin for some other disorder at about the same time he acquires syphilis. Although penicillin cures many cases of syphilis, the treatment must be intensive. A short course of penicillin treatment for some other disorder may temporarily suppress the manifestations of syphilis—which will appear later on. This is most unfortunate, when it occurs, because the disease gains time to develop in the body when its presence is not known. Unfortunate — but not fatal. Even recognized late, it is still amenable to treatment.

A doctor treats a patient—not a test.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Hemolytic Anemia

Daughter not strong, tires easily, suffers much pain at menstruation, flows excessively. Doctor says she has hematelic anemia and to cure it must remove her spleen. I'm not sure about spelling of hematelic but that's how it sounds. (Mrs. V. H.)

Answer—Perhaps it is hemolytic anemia. Removal of the spleen is the only means by which congenital (present at birth) hemolytic anemia can be relieved permanently. Your physician is the best judge of that. For simple anemia the suggestions in the pamphlet THE GRAY SICKNESS may help. For the pamphlet send stamped self-addressed envelope. Ask for it in writing. A clipping is likely to be lost.

What Does the Grocery Clerk Say?

Have been taking calcium on advice of my doctor inasmuch as laboratory tests show my blood calcium is very low. However several people have told me too much calcium is injurious. (J. A. H.)

Answer—Now all you need is the opinion of the grocery clerk and perhaps your barber. Why waste your time and money consulting the physician when all these experts are glad to take your case without charge?

First Few Handfuls Are The Worst

I am only 27 but losing my hair fast. (J. E. D.)

Answer—Send twenty-five ments and stamped self-addressed envelope for booklet THE HAIR AND SCALP. (Copyright 1950 by John F. Dille Co.)

WCA Pilot Says Northwest Seeing New Travel Boom

By WCA Chief Pilot Russ Bath

As one of 27 West Coast Airlines pilots who have flown 175,000 passengers 22,000,000 passenger miles during the past three years, I have become well acquainted with many of our passengers, the reasons they are traveling and the special uses to which they put a local or feeder airline service.

RUSS BATH

Although West Coast Airlines serves 22 communities in Western Washington and Oregon along 875 miles of one of the most varied and scenic air routes in the world, our personnel take pride in still maintaining a "friendly," personal helpfulness in dealing with the public. That's why we pilots have talked to businessmen covering their sales territories, housewives visiting relatives or doing special shopping in a metropolitan center, vacationers headed for one of the many outstanding recreation spots along the line, and to people "just along" for a scenic ride.

All of these people seem to have one thing in common: A genuine approval of this type of service that takes such a close personal interest in the communities it serves. They like the way it brings together the large and small communities of our great Northwest and establishes a closer, more intimate regional relationship.

And our pilots really know the territory they fly. Our West Coast captains have flown 33,000 hours, or nearly 5,000,000 miles between our terminal points of Bellingham, Seattle, Portland and Medford, since our airlines started. These are fast, frequent schedules in each direction at least twice a day which have already proven they give business or pleasure travelers access to neighboring cities in minutes or hours where days were once required.

Be seeing you soon—aboard one of those big, comfortable DC-3's on the only scheduled airline serving the Evergreen Empire exclusively—

The Grange

Butte Falls Grange

At the meeting of Butte Falls Grange, February 20, in the high school auditorium, it was emphasized that the first meeting of the month would be devoted to program and recreation, the second largely to initiation or installation, and general business. Mrs. John Shaw resigned as secretary because of ill health, and Mrs. Ernest Smith resigned as publicity chairman. Chaplain, Mrs. Robert Beeman, reported Mrs. Leatherman ill, Mrs. Mina Wright improved, and Mrs. Harry Heryford expected home soon.

Agriculture Chairman Earl Remsen called attention to the soil levelling program as conducted by the A.A.A. through the office in the county courthouse. He also explained that now was the time to get soil fumigants for ridding small areas of wireworms detrimental to garden produce. Now is also the time for spraying barns against flies.

Home economics club presented the program under direction of Mrs. John Holst. Fred Kincaid told the story of the Rancheria massacre of 1856. Mr. Kincaid formerly owned the land on which the graves of the five victims remain. Others who participated in the program were Everett Moore, Earl Remsen and Mrs. James Arnold. John Holst read Lincoln's speech on departure from Springfield.

Mrs. Beeman and Mrs. Kincaid placed a picture of George Washington on the stage and decorated the hall with Oregon grape, and streamers of red, white and blue.

Doughnuts and coffee were served by the Home Economics club with Mrs. Everett Moore and Mrs. Roy Green in charge.

Next Grange meeting will be March 6 when new members will be inducted into the first and second degrees.
