MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—SEVEN

FBI Informant Finds It Harder To Leave Communists Than To Join

Washington, Mar. 7.—(UP)—If you ask Matthew Cvetic, he'll tell you it's harder to get out of the communist party than it is to get in.

He knows. He's done both. Cvetic, 41, a pleasant, blue-eyed American-born Slav, posed as a communist for seven years to get information for the FBI. When he broke with the party recently, he tried to get a job. "Nobody would hire me," he said. "They didn't believe my story."

Cvetic recently exposed communist activity in the rich industrial centers of western Pennsylvania and gave the names of 146 party members to the house committee on un-American activities.

Aiding with Records
Now he is helping government agents classify 80 pounds of communist records he managed to get away with when he left the party. He estimated the documents will reveal the names of at least 200 additional communists in the Pittsburgh area.

Looking back on seven years of close association with the Reds, Cvetic said it amazes him that he never once was suspected of being an FBI informant.

"For five years I lived at the William Penn hotel in Pittsburgh under the name of 'Bob Stanton,' scarcely two blocks away from communist headquarters," he chuckled. "Hotel employees thought I was a novelist and used to ask me how my book was coming along."

His salary (a modest one) was delivered to him in cash by an FBI agent each week.

Cvetic's blue eyes clouded as he recounted the sacrifices he made to "play my role without detection."

"My friends deserted me. I was forced to give up my church. My father refused to let me come into his home. My mother died last October still thinking I was a communist."

"I once asked my twin sons what they wanted to be when they grew up and they told me they wanted to be a bum like me."

One son is now attending Duquesne university—the other is in the navy.

America Need Not Fear
Cvetic said he was convinced by his seven years as a communist that America need not fear "the magnitude of the party."

"In all that time," he said, "we were able to get only 550 to join the party."

He said the "real danger lies in the fact that the fanatic few worm their way into respectable American organizations, government departments and labor unions to let Moscow know everything that's going on in this country."

"I am convinced that Soviet espionage has no equal in the world today."

Strange Facts About Water

Water is the earth's greatest sculptor

Water is constantly at work cutting and leveling everything before it. The Grand Canyon, the fantastic Garden of the Gods in Colorado, the deep, beautiful Columbia Gorge are all evidence of the artistry of water.

UNDERGROUND WATER TREASURES

Deep beneath the surface of the earth at Tumwater, Washington, water has carved its way through rock strata. Free from seasonal variation in hardness, and devoid of undesirable minerals often found in surface waters, this subterranean treasure provides all of the water used in brewing Olympia Beer.
