Radio Patter by Pat

The first Medford edition of the Old Gold Amateur Hour... in a series of three being presented in an effort to send a representative of southern Oregon with all expenses paid to Portland for an opportunity to appear on the Old Gold Amateur Hour there, was held in the Craterian theatre last night before a large and enthusiastic audience. All six contestants—Keith Mirkic, Frances Thrum, Richard McCorkle, Sue Murphy, Ronald Peyton and Fred Bruener—displayed remarkable talent and stage presence. The three persons receiving the most votes from last night's broadcast will appear on a final elimination broadcast from the stage of the Craterian again on March 21. In order to vote for your favorite contestant, send your selection on a post card, or on

THE SANDMAN'S GRANDPA — NARCOLEPSY

Narcolepsy, a sleeping sickness, is a condition which is often misunderstood. It is not a disease of the mind, but a disease of the body. It is a condition which is often misunderstood. It is not a disease of the mind, but a disease of the body. It is a condition which is often misunderstood. It is not a disease of the mind, but a disease of the body.

With the exception of two disorders, very little is known as to the factors which bring on the "attack." Usually, there is very little diagnostic difficulty involved in separating the known causes from the unknown.

The victim of narcolepsy is utterly unable to resist falling asleep, even while engaged in some task requiring standing. If the attack comes on while sitting down, he may get up and move around in an effort to forestall it, but will fall asleep immediately upon sitting down again. The attacks often come on suddenly, without warning.

Some of the victims have the sad experience of taking stimulating drugs—which keep them awake all night—but which do not ward off the attacks during the day.

Narcolepsy may be quite fleeting or it may last for hours. Whether it is in some way related to epilepsy is not known. A hereditary factor seems to exist in epilepsy, but to my knowledge, this has not been observed in narcolepsy. Since certain aspects of the disorder follow the pattern of convulsions, (although they do not occur in narcolepsy) and since convulsions may be caused by certain drugs, on the basis of peculiar but common sensitivity to these drugs, the thought that narcolepsy might result from sensitivity, allergy—to certain substances, requires consideration.

It would be interesting to know what action the anti-allergic drugs might have on this condition. Many anti-allergic drugs have strong sedative action, and this, of course, would have to be properly assessed in any study along these lines. The narcoleptic could suffer no harm in exploring this possibility, under the guidance of an interested physician.

Some relief has been reported by usage of the well-known "peppermint" benzadrine. This is one of the drugs which causes a person to be awake all night. The continuous use of this drug would be a very undesirable prospect, indeed.

Every narcoleptic should undergo a searching physical and neurological examination. The disorder is relatively uncommon and our overall knowledge of it would be increased by close study of every available case. The suspicion that some organic change in the nervous system lies at the bottom of it, is hard to escape. Such a condition can be identified only by extensive study of the disorder and the need of establishing this point is very great. I regret that as matters stand, we have very little to offer the victim on the basis of our present knowledge.
