Freer Spending Noted In Farming Sections

Alfred, N. Y. (U.P.)—Residents of a three-county New York state agricultural area spent more cash and incurred more debts in 1949 than in either of the two preceding years, according to a study by Alfred university. Alfred has been observing the economic habits of residents of parts of Steuben, Allegany and Livingston counties since 1947. Borrowing from 14 of the area's 18 banks increased $22 per capita during 1949 and deposits decreased $18 per capita, the report showed. In reporting that $2,777,838 in cash left the area during 1949, the survey said the net outflow of funds has totaled $5,243,368 since the study was begun.

VIRUS PNEUMONIA IS DIFFERENT

A victim of pneumonia is usually pictured as a person with a high fever, gasping for breath, perhaps slightly blue in the face and exhibiting great prostration. That picture is accurate enough in a severe case of lobar pneumonia, although cases of lesser severity produce lesser symptoms. Virus pneumonia is pneumonia in its fullest sense but it differs in many respects from the bacteria-caused variety known either as lobar pneumonia or bronchopneumonia. The distinction between the latter two is that in lobar pneumonia, a whole section—or lobe—of the lung is affected while the remainder of the lungs are not involved. In bronchopneumonia, the process is "patchy" and may involve several different areas of the lung at the terminations of the bronchial tubes.

Because virus pneumonia does not follow the usual pattern—either as to symptoms or effects—it is also called atypical pneumonia, meaning not typical. Virus pneumonia invariably follows a preliminary respiratory infection conforming to the "flu" type—if it develops at all. The initial "flu" symptoms may vary from those common to CRI (the common cold) accompanied by malaise (disposition—fatigue—lethargy—lack of the sense of well-being), to feverishness, pains in the back and extremities, headache, a hacking cough and prostration.

Virus pneumonia may be suspected when one has CRI from which he does not readily recover. The "cold which hangs on," is another way of expressing it. (It must be remembered that lobar pneumonia may also conform to this pattern, occasionally). Severe virus pneumonia may produce symptoms of ordinary pneumonia in the first few days, but the signs that the doctor finds upon examination are not those of ordinary pneumonia.

X-ray examination is usually necessary to establish the diagnosis. It is often surprising how much involvement of the lungs the x-ray will reveal, when the ordinary signs and symptoms are comparatively slight. Thus, it is not unusual for a person to walk around, day after day, under the impression that he is merely having a little difficulty in "throwing off a cold," to find upon x-ray examination that he has an extensive pneumonia.

This has happened to victims of lobar pneumonia as well, but it must be conceded that they are much sicker persons throughout. Although cough and respiratory irritation in general are common to virus pneumonia, these are usually secondary in annoyance to the "washed-out" feeling—the utter lack of energy and disinclination to effort which characterizes most cases. In ordinary pneumonia, fever, cough and respiratory difficulty are more prominent, usually confining the victim to bed on his own.

Driver With Bad Eyes Surrenders License North Platte, Neb. (U.P.)—The Nebraska safety patrol usually has trouble convincing persons with poor eyesight that they shouldn't drive. So officers were dumbfounded when a man walked into headquarters and said: "Here's my driver's license. I've just had an examination by an eye specialist and he tells me my eyes are no longer good enough to drive an automobile."

STOLEN CAR TAGGED Indianapolis (U.P.)—Patrolman Ralph Lumpkin noticed a car with an overtime parking sticker which he had attached the day before still on it. A check at police headquarters revealed the automobile had been reported stolen.

Shady Cove - Trail

Shady Cove - Trail, Mar. 13—Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson of Shady Cove are parents of a seven-pound girl, born March 7 at the Sacred Heart hospital in Medford. The baby has been named Susan Kay. Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Wilson of Central Point and Mrs. Walt of South Dakota are the grandparents. This is the first child of the couple. Mrs. Wilson is getting along fine and will be home in a few days.

Guests over the week-end of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn E. Collins of Trail were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sexton of Molalla, Ore. Mrs. Lola Bartuss, chairman of Upper Rogue Extension unit wishes to invite any of the members needing help on their glove project to come to her house and she will be glad to assist them. Mrs. Bartuss, who suffered an injury to her foot and ankle in a fall recently, is confined to her home most of the time with a cast on her foot and leg.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Schauble have just returned from a 10-day trip through California and Nevada. They stopped in Oakland, Cal., to visit Mrs. Schauble's sister and then drove to Las Vegas, Nev., where they visited Mr. Schauble's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Coon and son, Jimmy, who are former residents of Shady Cove. Mrs. Coon is also the sister of Mrs. Zuba Walker of Shady Cove.

The regular monthly Sunday night square dance for Grange members and guests was held March 5 at the hall by Upper Rogue Grange with dancing starting at 7:30 p. m. Arlee Rogstad and Ray Briggs served as callers and Ed Cowden, old time fiddler from Eagle Point, played. A large number enjoyed the evening. Next session of square dancing will be held for Grangers and their friends on April 2, starting at 7:30 p. m.

Next regular bi-monthly meeting of Steelhead Post No. 6881, V.F.W. will be held March 15 at 8 p. m. at Rogue River Lodge. Post and auxiliary will hold both nominations and elections.

Mr. and Mrs. Wyles Berry of Trail left March 10 on a trip to California and Los Angeles where they will visit friends and relatives.

Next regular monthly meeting of Upper Rogue Extension unit will be on Tuesday, March 15 at the home of Mrs. T. J. Littlefield on Longbranch road. The project to be taken up at this meeting will be the making of lamp shades with Mrs. Leona Hughes as one of the project leaders.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Blair of Shady Cove are Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Bird and daughter of
