OUT OF THE WOODS

By Jim Stevens

The Traffic Tree . . .
It is an old truism of traffic as it runs on the railroads of this country that forest products yield the carriers more cars of revenue freight than any other commodity, outside coal. Nowadays more cars of wood, in all forms from logs and fuel to the finest in furniture and textiles, are rolling over the rails than ever before while coal traffic dwindles.

Traffic is a living force in an actual body. Paul Bunyan and his Blue Ox were a couple of bugs in comparison with the traffic tree of the Northwest Coast in our time. Its roots are the entire douglas fir region. Its trunk and branches are the railroads that run to California, Texas, and states east of the mountains.

The great harvest yield of this traffic tree is in the flow of lumber and related products through distribution channels into home building and thousands of other everyday uses of wood which return revenue to the northwest and pay the freight.

This traffic tree is a vital structure of complex growth. It demands constant technical work between the lumber industry and the railroads, with the government of course playing a powerful part.

Here we come to the heart of the matter on the place of the trade association in the life of our region. The big job of the Association of American Railroads is to work with shippers on shipping problems. In our region the West Coast Lumbermen's association was formed around 40 years ago to work with the railroads on lumber shipping problems for the whole industry.

This is still a top task for both associations. And the WCLA traffic department works all the time with individual railroad companies, of course. A case that has been in the news pretty regularly since the war is that of boxcar shortages. On such a problem even the larger lumber companies could do little individually in the nation-wide competition of shippers for cars. But the technical staff of the lumber trade associations, speaking for the entire industry, came through with one victory after another that brought more cars to the small sawmill operator just as much as to big shippers of forest products.

Of particular concern to the small mill man, whose product is commonly rough green lumber, is the "Rules Governing the Loading of Lumber Single Cars and Box Cars" as set up by the mechanical division of the Association of American Railroads. They are a highly technical proposition.

It goes without saying that the railroads are tough on this business. When an open carload of lumber breaks apart on a freight run there's usually more than hell to pay. This question is just one of many characteristic of the armed forces . . .

17 Selected

At the drill class last week 17 were selected to start on the fancy drill work with Col. Krista Stelle to be the first to take the lead with baton signals.

They are getting ready for the Portland Rose festival in June. The number who will go all depends upon how large a fund is raised. Several events are now being planned to increase this fund. Heine says he would like to take three bus loads. Lots of newspapers are needed for immediate turnover, which may be left on the front porch at 916 West 10th street. The paper drives have brought in a substantial part of the fund and the general public can help by saving newspapers, Heine said.

Fire-Damaged Timber To Be Up For Sale
Some 150,000 board feet of fire-damaged ponderosa pine timber will be sold at "attractive" prices by the bureau of land management, it was announced today by District Forester Eugene K. Peterson.

The timber is on areas damaged by the Blackwell fire and Foot creek fires last fall, and should be harvested immediately to avoid staining, Peterson said.

Operators with light equipment should be able to log this area profitably, Peterson said, and he urged those interested to get in touch with his office in the city hall.

Toy Cars In Use To Describe Accidents
City police have placed in service a new, home-made device for use in interviews and court testimony concerning auto accidents.

The equipment consists of a blackboard and nine model cars and trucks. The wooden vehicles are clung to the board by use of inset magnets. Chalk is employed to outline street locations. Chief of Police Clatous McCredie said that the new method is much more satisfactory than pencil sketches.

Police men made the model cars.

Armed Forces Day Designated; Local Observances Set

A copy of President Truman's proclamation designating May 20 as Armed Forces day has been received in Medford, and plans are well under way for observance of the two-day Armed Forces observance to be held here.

Young men of the valley who are interested in participating in a drill team which will give exhibition drills on the week-end of May 19 and 20 have been invited to report to the armory at 7 p. m. tomorrow.

Those joining the drill team do not necessarily have to belong to any reserve unit, according to Capt. William O'Brien, commander of volunteer training unit No. 13-21 of the marine reserves, but he asked all ex-marines and reserves to attend meetings of the drill unit in order to assure its success.

Weekly meeting will be held until the Armed Forces day program.

Directs Observance
He directed that appropriate observances be conducted by members of the armed services, and the Medford celebration is in conformity with this directive.

"I call upon my fellow citizens to display the flag . . . at their homes . . . and to participate in exercises expressive of our recognition of the skill, gallantry and devotion to duty characteristic of the armed forces . . ."
