WHAT HORMONES DO TO CANCER

A hormone is a chemical substance produced by an organ of the body which, when transported to other organs or tissues, produces certain effects. The formation of the body functions in response to formation and action of these hormones. When certain hormones decrease in volume or disappear from the body, or when, for some reason, they develop in excessive quantities, bodily diseases develop.

When the hormone produced by the thyroid gland is excessive, a condition known as "hyperthyroidism" develops which is characterized by emotional instability, rapid pulse, loss of weight, profuse sweating and other signs. When the thyroid hormone is deficient in infancy, cretinism—arrested physical and mental development, results. If the hormone secretion becomes deficient in the adult, lethargy and other symptoms appear.

The organs or glands which manufacture hormones are controlled by or subject to the influence of hormones from other glands. The pituitary gland which lies at the base of the brain is regarded as the "master gland" of the hormone system. Some organs or glands produce several different hormones, each with a capacity for action peculiar to itself alone.

Certain hormones peculiar to sex are known as the male and female sex hormones. When a female sex hormone is injected into a male, masculinizing influences, such as the appearance of a beard, may result. Dr. Charles Huggins of Chicago, was first to discover some surprising actions of hormones on cancer. He established that if the hormones peculiar to the male sex were removed or greatly diminished, cancer of the prostate gland in a given individual tended to disappear. While this action seemed permanent in some cases, he found that after a lapse of years or at least many months, the cancer again commenced to "grow" and "spread."

Somewhat comparable results were obtained by "neutralizing" the male sex hormone by the injection of female sex hormone. This research opened new vistas in cancer and hormone research and undoubtedly contributed to the research incentive and effort which produced "ACTH," the miraculous hormone substance which is the most exciting news in medicine today.

Some peculiar and paradoxical findings have resulted from further research. It has been established, for instance, that the male sex hormone, if injected into a female with cancer had an effect in slowing its growth and spread. If the female sex organs were removed, a comparable action resulted. It was thus established that sex hormones stimulated the development of cancer, already existing when of the same sex type, and that these hormones depressed the development of cancer when used in opposite sex types.

However, this action seems to depend on the age of the patient to a large extent. Elderly persons have shown improvement under the use of sex hormones which seem to stimulate cancer in younger persons. The reason for this is unknown at the present time.

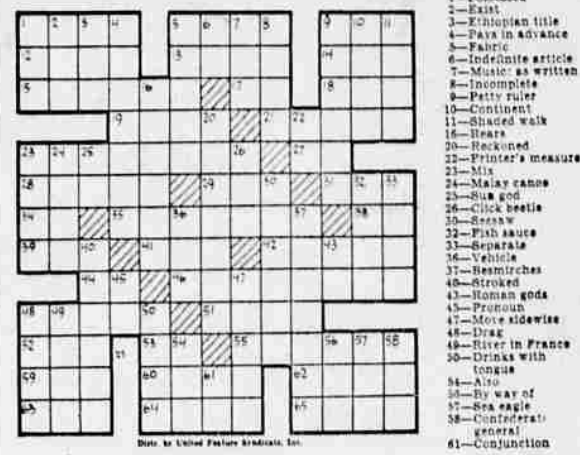

Some victims of cancer, learning of the action of hormones, have refused operation and have insisted upon treatment with hormones alone. This is very un-

Cancer Victim Jumps To Death From Hotel

Cost of Living Drops Two-Tenths Of One Per Cent In Last 30 Days
Washington, March 27—(U.P.)—The cost of living fell two-tenths of one per cent in the month ended February 15, the bureau of labor statistics reported today.

The consumers' price index for February 15, was 166.5 per cent of the 1935-39 average. The February average was 1.5 per cent lower than last year, but 25 per cent higher than in June, 1946 when price controls were relaxed.

The drop in living costs was due to a six-tenths of one per cent fall in food prices and a small skid in clothing prices.

Dickey estimated there were 30,000 rats in the city and said they were causing $800,000 damage annually.

The exterminator said Corvallis had an uninterrupted supply of rats moving in constantly because of its location on the Willamette river. He said the rat population probably had been encouraged by the fact that 90 per cent of garbage cans in downtown alleys were left uncovered.
