Big Audiences See Marionettes Perform

Near-capacity audiences attended both matinee and evening performances of the Williams Marionettes at the Medford high school auditorium yesterday. The play presented was "Hansel and Gretel."

WEDNESDAY REALTY VIEWS

"I don't even want to be there when you show our house for sale," remarked a mild-mannered, middle-aged lady. "Our house means a lot to us. It has sentimental value, and I wouldn't want to hear people finding fault with it and picking it to pieces."

That's an understandable position for an owner. People do get attached to houses and regard them with fond affection. Which is good! But it illustrates the need for a competent real estate broker. Since an owner has only one property to sell he is often biased in his opinion of it. He probably does not know the latest selling prices on homes in all sections of Medford, he may regard his house as a friend and hate to hear it criticized. Or he may exaggerate its adaptability for another family.

But the real estate broker usually has a broader view. He is familiar with current prices and with many properties. The comments of a buyer are not resented. It gives him an opportunity to point out how the faults may be overcome or to find another property more adaptable to the buyer's requirements.

We are specialists—not in selling houses—but in HELPING people BUY the kind of home which best matches their needs and pocketbooks.

That's it in a nutshell! Let us help YOU to find a suitable home which you can afford.
