Japanese Search Plane Made Reconnaissance Trip Over Seattle During War

Tokyo, April 5—(U.P.)—Capt. Samuel Elliot Morison, official United States navy historian and Harvard professor, said today a Japanese search plane successfully made a reconnaissance of Seattle and reported on shipping in Puget Sound during World War II.

Despite the Japanese reconnaissance, Morison said the United States navy discounted the value of plane-carrying submarines and had found them impractical.

However, he told the Tokyo Correspondents' club he was a "great believer" in carrier-based airpower. He said it would be a mistake to abandon it.

He said the Japanese navy contributed no new and useful strategic or tactical conceptions during the Pacific war except for the idea of an independent carrier striking force.

"They were the first to use it," he said, "at Pearl Harbor."

Former Oregon Man To Lead Brand Name Group

New York, Apr. 5—Frank M. Folsom, president of the Radio Corporation of America, will continue as director of Brand Names foundation, it was announced today during the fifth annual Brand Names day celebration at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

Former Ashland Newsman Passes

Salem, Ore., April 5—(U.P.)—Carlton K. Logan, member of the news staff of the Capital Journal since 1927 and the newspaper's first valley editor, died at his home here yesterday from a heart ailment.

Logan, familiarly known as "C. K.," was at his desk at the Capital Journal Monday. His death was unexpected.

Logan was born in Kansas April 25, 1896, the son of Harry Scott and Mary Logan. He grew up in Oregon, graduating from Albany high school and entering Albany college. Later he transferred to Oregon State college and from there went to University of Oregon.

In 1921 Logan went to work on the Courier at Grants Pass and from there he went to the Ashland Tidings, which he served as editor. While in Ashland, he was married in 1923 to the former Anne Forberg, who survives him.

In that same year, 1923, Logan joined the news staff of the Oregon Statesman here. He worked on that paper until 1927 when he came to the Capital Journal as its first valley editor.

Egyptian Workmen Uncover Bodies Buried 5,000 Years

Helwan, Egypt, Apr. 5—(U.P.)—Skilled Egyptian workmen today uncovered the well-preserved bodies of four men and two women buried for at least 5,000 years.

King Farouk financed the excavation in which workers specially selected for their delicate touch used shaving brushes to clear the last grains of sand from the coffins of grass in which the bodies had reposed for 50 centuries.

From First Dynasty A young archeologist, Zaki Saad, headed the expedition which found the burial site, dating from the first dynasty, in this suburban town 15 miles south of Cairo.

The old, dry grass disintegrated at the slightest touch as the coffins were being removed, and the bodies it had protected since the dawn of history began to be visible for the first time since about 3000 B.C.

The first body uncovered was that of a woman. As the grass was cleared painstakingly away, her head still showed locks of hair. The skull and teeth were well preserved, and there was a distinct feminine contour to the rest of the body.

Buried on Left Side The woman had been buried on her left side, facing west, with her head to the south. Her knees were pulled up to the breast. One hand was under her left cheek, the other rested on her chin.

Zaki Saad said it was customary to bury the dead in the position of an embryo to prepare them for rebirth to eternal life.

Jars and skillfully worked small alabaster vessels and necklaces of colored stones lay under the body. There was no indication of her name.

One of the male bodies showed clear signs of having had a leg fracture when alive. The bone was removed carefully for examination by medical experts.

Cat With Part of Brain Survives

Tulsa, Okla.—(U.P.)—A female cat with two-thirds of a brain has been put to work here for the betterment of mankind.

Dr. Averill Stowell, Tulsa neurosurgeon said some misconceptions of the human brain are being corrected by his experiments on the cat. One-third of the animal's brain was removed in 11 delicate operations.

The cat appears normal, except for an exaggerated, ponderous walk.

Stowell believes that humans, like the cat, could operate with as much as one-third of their brains removed.

One of the false ideas being corrected in the experiments is that the cerebellum, a principal organ in the central nervous system, functions only to co-ordinate muscles.

"We now believe that the cerebellum has other functions," Stowell said. "We also believe that other parts of the brain have to do with co-ordination."

New Toothpaste Tube To End Squabbles

Stillwater, Okla.—(U.P.)—A Stillwater firm is marketing a device designed to end all family squabbles about how toothpaste tubes should be squeezed.

It fits around a toothpaste tube and squeezes it evenly with rollers, starting from the bottom. The user operates the rollers by turning a small handle.

The invention also is guaranteed to get every bit of paste out of the tube. It was designed by Leonard Whitson, an electric meter tester for the city of Stillwater.

BROTHERS SERVE LONG

Boston—(U.P.)—Pat and Mike Donoghue, brothers, retired from the Metropolitan Transit authority after a combined total of 91 years' service on the public transportation system.

Stream Pollution Bans Are Enacted by States

Chicago (U.P.)—Individual states are becoming more concerned with stream pollution control, the American Public Works association reports.

Legislatures of at least eight states took some action last year to tighten anti-pollution laws or increase enforcement of sanitation laws now on the books.

Others have set up pollution commissions. In Wisconsin, a five-man committee on pollution was set up to stimulate cities to build sewage treatment plants and a $125,000

13 Just Unlucky For This Conductor

Green Bay, Wis.—(U.P.)—Ray Smith, railroad conductor, is convinced 13 is an unlucky number.

The North Western conductor was in charge of a 13-car train that had to wait behind another before pulling into the Green Bay station.

The trouble came when police found the 13th coach across a federal highway and served Smith with a warrant for blocking the crossing for 24 minutes. Appropriation was voted by the legislature.
