REMOVING TONSIL TISSUE AFTER REMOVAL OF TONSILS

For many years I have been trying to tell you gullible Yankee Wiseacres, and your "specialists" the under the "truth about tonsillectomy"—namely, that the operation usually fails to "get all of the tonsil," despite the fact that the operation is a "simple" procedure. If any member of the medical profession questions the accuracy of my statement, the testimony of numerous recognized authorities in my files is available to him or her.

If the tonsils are greatly enlarged and obviously obstruct breathing, tonsillectomy is the preferable treatment. In my opinion, tonsillectomy means cutting or slicing off a portion of the tonsil, enough to relieve the obstruction to breathing.

(Tonsillectomy means cutting or dissecting out the entire tonsil—or as the fast-talking "specialist" expresses it before the operation, "getting every bit of the tonsil." It is a formidable procedure. Compared with all its hazards, tonsillectomy is a minor operation with no greater risk than is involved in extracting a tooth.

The reason why many ever-ready operators dwell so persistently on the importance of "getting all of the tonsil"—as though tonsil tissue were harmful to have in one's throat—is that a modern method of treating infected (not merely enlarged) tonsils, in fact the method of choice in my opinion, does NOT "get all of the tonsil." I refer to the diathermy method, electro-coagulation, the object of which is to sterilize, disinfect, destroy, pasteurize, eradicate or drain the nidus or area or infection without disturbing normal surrounding tonsil tissue more than is necessary.

Another specious argument which the masters of the old Spanish custom have used with deadly effect is that, "scar tissue" following diathermy (electro-coagulation) treatment of infected tonsils, is likely to cover up infection and the hidden focal infection in such event would continue to give the patient trouble. A pretty theory, if you have no doubt about the actuality of focal infection in the first place.

Reader M. A. has such a problem. His tonsils were removed twelve years ago. Three years ago he developed trouble in his leg which proved to be osteomyelitis (infection and inflammation of the bone marrow). Recently he consulted a new doctor who examined his throat, observed scar tissue in the tonsils (a great many persons who have undergone tonsillectomy once or twice still have tonsil tissue in the throat) and urged the patient to undergo tonsillectomy to remove the scar tissue, uncover the presumptive focus of infection and, when that was cleared up, the patient's osteomyelitis would respond to treatment.

However, the patient sought the advice of another nose and throat specialist. This one told him it would be foolish to undergo the operation, that there was no indication of infection under the scar tissue or in the tonsil stumps, or remnants remaining in the throat.

Finally the patient consulted another specialist—what he calls a circulation specialist, whatever that may be. This specialist examined him and expressed the opinion that no infection in the throat or no scar tissue there could account for the condition in his leg, and that only operation of the veins in the leg would improve circulation in the leg.

But who am I to tell you Yankee Wiseacres what is reasonably safe treatment and what isn't? You know as well as I do that hundreds of poor geeks are subjected to tonsillectomy and nearly all of them come through unscathed.

Songstress Dinah Shore will return to the scene of her start in network radio when she makes the boys in the back room come out to hear her perform on ABC's "Strictly from Dixie" musical extra vaganza tonight at 9:30 over Station KVJC.

History will be repeating itself all over the place during the program. The first song, sung by Miss Shore in her debut some 10 years ago, "Mad About Em Blues," and written by a Radio City page boy, will be sung on the broadcast by Martha Lou Harp, current vocalist.

An interesting couple will be married on the "Bride & Groom" program tomorrow which is aired Monday through Friday at 2:30 p.m. over KVJC. Leny Janet Dam, 26, visitor from Holland, will marry Mayrant Dorsey, McKeown, 26, of Long Beach and then, following her honeymoon, will return to Holland until arrangements can be made for her proper entry into the United States as an immigrant.

"The Old Rugged Cross," one of America's best loved hymns and the favorite hymn of Harold "Red" Grange, football's famed "Galloping Ghost," will be sung by bass-baritone George Beverly Shea and the Club Choral singers when "Club Time" is presented over Station KVJC and the American Broadcasting company from 3 to 3:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Hear Miss Ruth Nelson, superintendent of the Community hospital, at 12:40 p.m. tomorrow in a brief message about cancer... on Station KVJC.
